FEAR ATTEMPT TO KILL KAISER; TROOPS OUT

Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, now visiting the King of England. Rumors of a plot to assassinate him have caused a panic in London.

Swarm of Detectives and Secret Service Men About the Imperial Visitor, While Soldiers Guard Railway from Windsor to London —Dragnet Out for Reds.

LONDON, Nov. 12. Alarmed by rumors of an anarchistic plot to kill Kaiser Wilhelm to-morrow, on the occasion of his trip from Windsor Castle to Guildhall, where he will lunch with the Lord Mayor of London, thousands of secret service men from all over Europe have been hastily summoned to aid the troops in safeguarding the ruler of Germany.

Hundreds of detectives are to-day searching London, gathering in all the "Reds" known to be in the city and arresting every suspicious person who cannot satisfactorily explain his presence in London at this time. Details of secret service men loaned to the government by department heads in Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg, Vienna, Madrid and Rome are assisting Scotland Yard in the watch for dangerous foreigners.

TROOPS TO GUARD KAISER.

Never before in England's history have arrangements so elaborate been made to guard royalty.

From the moment the Kaiser leaves Windsor Castle until he reaches Guildhall, he will move between walls of soldiers, who will keep all crowds at a distance.

SOLDIERS LINE RAILROAD.

The railway line from Windsor to Paddington will be inspected almost inch by inch, a dummy train will precede the Kaiser's special, and the twenty-odd miles will be made between nearly continuous lines of troops, a military display such as has never been seen in England before.

A troop of mounted life guards will completely surround the imperial carriage on its trip from Paddington to the Guildhall, traffic will be stopped and ranks of soldiers will line the curbs on either side of Oxford street, Holborn and Cheapside, through which the Kaiser must pass.

The Kaiser will make the only public appearance of his stay in England to-morrow, when he will lunch with the Lord Mayor at Guildhall.

To-day both he and the Empress, with the rest of the German royal party, are at Windsor Castle.

The Kaiser sprung a surprise on the British officials who had been waiting at Portsmouth to pay him honors by landing when all the British had gone to luncheon.

The Emperor apparently enjoyed the joke on his hosts.

Owing to delay caused by fog the time for landing of the imperial party was miscalculated.

After inspecting the guards of honor, the Emperor and party, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, left Portsmouth by train for Windsor amid the fire of a royal salute.

The imperial party reached Windsor at 5 o'clock and were warmly greeted by King Edward and Queen Alexandra. The two monarchs and their wives cordially embraced and then went to Windsor Castle.

SIGNAL CAUSES COMMOTION.

The commotion over Admiral Sir Percy Scott's flippant signal to the cruisers to "come in, repaint and look pretty," for the Kaiser's benefit, regardless of efficiency in gunnery, threatens to develop into an extremely unpleasant navy scandal.

The general impression is that Admiral Lord Charles Beresford would have gone beyond a mere reprimand had he not beheaded Sir Percy backed up in his attitude by First Lord of the Admiralty Sir John Fisher. The impression is that the censured commander may take advantage of this powerful support to demand some kind of a vindication.

LINEHAN'S PARTNER CANNOT BE FOUND

W. J. HALLION, CITY CONTRACTOR, IS VAINLY SOUGHT BY CONSTABLES.

William J. Hallion, to whom were awarded contracts to the amount of $26,-870 by the city from April 15, 1904, to January 8, 1907, and whose testimony as to the obtaining of these contracts is desired by the Finance Commission, cannot be located to-day by the constables serving summonses.

According to the Boston Directory Hallion boards at No. 193 West Fifth street, South Boston. That is the house occupied by Senator Frank J. Linehan, whose contracts as the Atlas Construction Company at Deer Island are now being investigated by the Finance Commission.

Senator Linehan says that he doesn't know where Hallion is. "I wish he would show up," he said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "It would help me out."

Matthews Denies Charges.

Constable Reid told the Finance Commission at the hearing last night on the Deer Island contracts, during the course of which Senator Linehan was ordered removed from the hearing because he persisted in asking questions, that he had called at the West Fifth street house and was told that Hallion was not in. Senator Linehan told the constable, according to the latter's testimony, that Hallion did not live there then.

Neither did Foreman Conroy of the Atlas company know where Hallion was when questioned by Constable Reid.

Chairman Nathan Matthews of the Finance Commission to-day replied to the charges made by Senator Linehan at the three South Boston meetings that the father of Mr. Matthews had sold land on Bristol street to the city while the son was Mayor, sending the charge as false.

"No Interest Whatever."

In his statement Chairman Mathews says:

"I am not in the habit of replying to malicious accusations, however false, and my only excuse for trespassing on your space on this occasion is that the particular slander to which this letter relates affects the memory of my father, who is no longer here to defend himself.

"My father had no interest whatever in the land in question or in its sale to the city, and, so far as my memory serves me, the city did not purchase any land from him during the term of my father.

A committee of the Building Trades Section of the Central Labor Union is in Deer Island to-day investigating the charges made by John J. Carney, business agent of Boston Laborers' Union, that the Atlas Construction Company is employing laborers on Island for twenty-five cents an hour, when the union scale is thirty cents, and were without union cards. These men, it is charged, were employed by the Atlas Construction Company on the ground that was under the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee to-night Senator Linehan will probably be a witness.

MATTHEWS MAKES ANSWER TO LAND SALES CHARGES

Editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—There has recently appeared in your paper an accusation made by a person connected with some of the transactions now under investigation by the Finance Commission, that my father, the Mayor of this city in 1891 the site for the fire department headquarters on Bristol street was purchased from my father.

I am not in the habit of replying to malicious accusations, however false, and my only excuse for trespassing upon your space on this occasion is that the particular slander to which this letter relates affects the memory of my father, who is no longer here to defend himself.

My father had no interest whatever in the land in question or in its sale to the city, and, so far as my memory serves me, the city did not purchase any land from him during the term of office.

Lynch, who was sleeping in a room adjoining the one near which the fire started, managed to make his way through the blazing hallway to the first floor. Then with Cosgrove, who had escaped from the window, he ran through the corridors of the hotel waking the guests. The women were gathered in scant attire in the big dining room on the first floor of the south wing, where they were comfortable. Many sought refuge in scant attire in the Union Station and removed their belongings to other hotels.

The loss by fire was not so great, but the entire hotel was drenched with water. The loss is estimated at from $30,000 to $40,000. The hotel is owned by Walter Garde of Hartford, whose late father, "Billy" Garde, was formerly proprietor. For several years the hotel has been leased by Ernest D. G. Meyers, who came here from New York. His son, Fred H. Meyers, was ill with pneumonia in the hotel and had to be carried from his room during the fire.

COLD WAVE IS OVER; MERCURY CLIMBING BACK

Reaches Climax To-day, and Rays of Sun Lessen Grip of Frost King.

The cold wave which reached its climax in Boston at 7 a. m. to-day will be all over by to-morrow afternoon, according to the charge at the weather station. The limit of temperature was 34 degrees above zero, which was reached at 7. Since then the mercury has been going up slowly, but steadily.

The weather station predicted the cold wave last week. It was a little slow in getting around, but when it came it was here enough to make up for lost time. The temperature dropped about a degree an hour, but this morning's sun sent it on its upward way again.

It was predicted to-day that the temperature would keep on climbing until to-morrow afternoon, when warm weather would again be established.

LEWIS MORRIS, POET, DEAD.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Sir Lewis Morris, the poet, died to-day. He was an Oxford man and besides writing much verse, produced several creditable prose stories, and practised as a barrister. He was born in Wales seventy-four years ago and was knighted in 1895.

5 DIE IN FIRE PANIC AS BIG HOTEL BURNS

HUNDREDS FLEE, SCANTILY CLAD, IN NEW HAVEN, AS FLAMES SWEEP STRUCTURE.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 12.—Five lives were lost and four persons were more or less seriously injured in a fire which gutted the fourth and fifth stories of the Hotel Garde, one of the best known hotels in town, opposite the Union station, in this city, shortly after 4 o'clock this morning. The fire started outside the room of H. C. Ackerman, a New York traveling man, on the fifth floor. It is supposed that a lighted cigarette carelessly dropped on the floor of the corridor started the blaze.

The dead are: Isaac Lavigne, who from papers found on his body is believed to be from Lake Champlain, N. Y.; John Usa; Jacob Dubbin; Henry Davis, believed to have been a resident of Worcester; and Julius Synavkya or Schanoski. In his pockets were found papers bearing the name M. Simpson and an address, No. 21 Sprague street, Providence.

The injured: P. Antolin, badly burned about face and hands and body, in New Haven Hospital; John Lynch, bell boy, singed by flames; Nicholas Miles, jumped from window, right knee wrenched; Israel Lippcott, slightly burned and blacked.

Trapped by Flames.

The men who were burned were practically confined in two large rooms used for the help to sleep in. The fire was confined to the north wing of the hotel and though the one hundred and fifty guests were awakened by the cry of fire and rushed in a panic stricken condition through the corridors and out into the street, none of them were injured.

At 4 o'clock this morning, after three hours' fighting, firemen were still searching the ruins and there were rumors of more victims who had not been accounted for, but at 6 o'clock this morning it was stated that the list of dead remains at five. Antolin, who is at the hospital, was reported to be in a serious condition and he may not recover.

The men burned with Levine, who was killed by jumping, and Michael Cosgrove, a bellboy, were all sleeping in one room on the fifth floor. Where the five men and they were confined in the room. Cosgrove fought his way to a window and threw out a rope, on which he descended safely to the ground and escaped unhurt. Levine appeared at the window next and coming out of a puff of smoke and flame, attempted to come down the rope, but when a little way down fell to the ground. He was picked up by the crowd, and it is supposed his death was so much due to his burns as to the fall. When the fire was extinguished the four other bodies were found in the charred room, one of them kneeling in prayer. All were nearly unrecognizable.

Roused Sleeping Guests.

Lynch, who was sleeping in a room adjoining the one near which the fire started, managed to make his way through the blazing hallway to the first floor. Then with Cosgrove, who had escaped from the window, he ran through the corridors of the hotel waking the guests. The women were gathered in scant attire in the big dining room on the first floor of the south wing, where they were comfortable. Many sought refuge in scant attire in the Union Station and removed their belongings to other hotels.

The loss by fire was not so great, but the entire hotel was drenched with water. The loss is estimated at from $30,000 to $40,000. The hotel is owned by Walter Garde of Hartford, whose late father, "Billy" Garde, was formerly proprietor. For several years the hotel has been leased by Ernest D. G. Meyers, who came here from New York. His son, Fred H. Meyers, was ill with pneumonia in the hotel and had to be carried from his room during the fire.

COSTS UP TO "NEXT FRIENDS"

Court in Mrs. Eddy Case Decides They Must Pay Expenses.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 12.—The "next friends," Mrs. Eddy's relatives, who made an unsuccessful attempt to investigate the financial affairs of the Christian Science leader and her church, were to-day ordered to pay all the costs of that expensive litigation and, in addition, a portion of the fees of the "masters" who examined Mrs. Eddy's mental condition.

Judge Chamberlain of the Superior Court, before whom the case was tried, ordered that summons be issued against the plaintiffs for the recovery of these costs and that when the trustees of Mrs. Eddy's estate receive judgment against them for $3,000 they apply in payment of the "masters" fees.

This sanity commission consisted of two eminent alienists and a prominent lawyer, and their fees, which the public are said to be the highest ever paid for this class of service, are estimated at $3,000 or more, and Judge Chamberlain to-day ordered that the said trustees be held responsible.

Deducting the $3,000 which the trustees will collect for this purpose from the next friends, the total cost of the litigation to Mrs. Eddy's estate, so far as the public knows, will be about $5,000. It is understood, however, that when the case was withdrawn from court some agreement was entered into between the litigants which will enable the next friends to escape more easily than the judgment against them to-day would indicate.

GETS 6 MONTHS FOR CRASH

WORCESTER, Nov. 12.—Because he overran a switch with his trolley on August 29 last, and collided with a car driven by George H. Fitzgerald, killing Fitzgerald, Nelson B. Smith, a Worcester & Southbridge railroad motorman, was found guilty of manslaughter in the Superior Court to-day, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment by Judge Edward T. Dana. He was immediately taken to jail.

James W. Anderson, superintendent of the railroad, who gave Smith verbal orders instead of written orders to hold the car on a switch at Charlton, was acquitted of manslaughter yesterday afternoon.

The Smith case was given to the jury yesterday afternoon, and after several hours' deliberation a sealed verdict was rendered.

MATTHEWS MAKES ANSWER TO LAND SALES CHARGES

Editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—There has recently appeared in your paper an accusation made by a person connected with some of the transactions now under investigation by the Finance Commission, that my father, the Mayor of this city in 1891 the site for the fire department headquarters on Bristol street was purchased from my father.

I am not in the habit of replying to malicious accusations, however false, and my only excuse for trespassing upon your space on this occasion is that the particular slander to which this letter relates affects the memory of my father, who is no longer here to defend himself.

My father had no interest whatever in the land in question or in its sale to the city, and, so far as my memory serves me, the city did not purchase any land from him during my term of office.

Having received numerous inquiries into the matter and have received the following explains itself:

"Harvard Office, Harvard University, "Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 11, 1907.

"Hon. Nathan Matthews,
"1134 Tremont Building,
"Boston, Mass.:

"My dear Mr. Matthews:

"The site of the fire department headquarters on Bristol street, Boston, was purchased by the city of Boston in 1891 from Peter W. Folsom and Edmund J. Folsom, who were then, and for several years previous had been, the owners of the property. I served as attorney for the Folsoms in transferring the property to the city, receiving the purchase money, and paid it over to them. I distinctly remember the transaction and know that your father had no interest whatever in the land or in the sale to the city of Boston.

"I go as far as I dare to understand how any one, except a slanderer, could assert that your father had anything to do with this transaction, as the slightest examination of the records at the Registry of Deeds or at City Hall would have satisfied the inquirer that the facts are as set forth above.

"With best wishes for the continued success of the most excellent work your committee is accomplishing.

"Very truly yours, "(Signed) JAMES BARR AMES."

Upon further inquiry I find that the land in question was the property of the city until the year 1853, when it was sold to Peter W. and Edmund J. Folsom by deed, dated May 24, and recorded with Suffolk Deeds, book 1703, page 20. It was brought back by the city from the Folsoms in 1891 by a deed, also signed by both branches of the City Council, and approved by me as Mayor, under date of July 16, 1891. The order is as follows:

"CITY OF BOSTON.

In Common Council, June 25, 1891.

"Ordered:

"That the Board of Fire Commissioners, with the approval of His Honor the Mayor, be hereby authorized to purchase, as a site for a building for headquarters of the fire department, a lot of land on Bristol street, adjoining the city of Boston, and containing 116 square feet, for the sum of two dollars per square foot; the expense thus incurred to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Department, Headquarters, etc.

Passed. Sent up for concurrence. In Board of Aldermen, July 13, concurred. Approved by the Mayor July 16, 1891. A true copy.

Attest: JOHN T. PRIEST,
Assistant City Clerk.

The land was conveyed to the city by deed of Peter W. and Edmund J. Folsom, dated August 13, 1891, and recorded with Suffolk Deeds, book 2312, page 305. The purchase money, $6,232, was paid by the city on August 21 on the order of the Messrs. Folsom to Mr. W. M. McInnes, their attorney in fact; and, as appears from his letter, was immediately paid over to the Folsoms in equal shares.

Trusting that you will have the courtesy to make this letter public, I remain,

Very truly yours,
N. MATTHEWS.

COULTHURST CHEERED AT LEAGUERS' MEETING

Candidate for Mayoralty Nomination Congratulates the Organization on Its Great Showing in the Recent Election, and Outlines the Policy for Which He Stands—How City Debt Has Leaped Upward Under the Fitzgerald Administration.

Mr. Chairman and members of the City Committee of the Independence League:

As this is quite an important event I have deemed it a matter of importance to put what I have to say to you in written form.

This is the first time that you have come together since the State election. I wish to congratulate you upon the magnificent showing of the Independence League in the re-election of District Attorney John B. Moran, the election of Senator-elect McEttrick and in the grand vote given your standard bearer, Thomas L. Hisgen, in the city of Boston and in the State of Massachusetts.

We are now about to enter upon a municipal campaign where a glorious opportunity is presented to you, the results of which I predict will mark an epoch in the history of the city of Boston.

In the first place the primaries should receive our attention. While there are less than 200 enrolled voters of the Independence League, there are several thousand who are eligible to vote in our primaries, and there is a scheme on foot, which we must take means to checkmate, to steal the nomination for Mayor by political trickery. We will take care of that problem because "forewarned we are forearmed."

In the second place, after the primaries we have a hard fight ahead of us. Ours shall be a poor man's campaign, without campaign funds, without the means of getting one, and we must fight to the death a political opponent who has boasted at a meeting of the Democratic chairmen that he will spend $250,000 to be re-elected.

Platform Appeals to Independent Men.

On the other hand, we have a platform which can appeal to all voters of our city who have no axes to grind. We must make an appeal to the independent, common-sense citizens whose chief regard in municipal affairs is good government and an economic administration of municipal affairs.

With such a platform properly expounded to the voters and without a campaign fund we are bound to be victorious if we are aroused, if we work hard enough, and if by rallies and through the press sufficient publicity is given to our principles. Let our cry from now until election day be municipal reform.

Let us go out to the voters and tell them that the spoils system will be abolished in City Hall if I am elected Mayor; that heads of departments will be chosen, not out of consideration for their political services, but distinctly upon merit; that all subordinate positions in city government shall be given upon a distinctly civil service basis. Let us tell the voters that it is dishonest for a chief executive, or his heads of departments, to give out contracts for work or supplies without competition, especially to political henchmen, or men who will then be expected to contribute to a campaign fund later.

Let us tell the voters from every stump that all contracts will be given out on honor and on competition. And let us also call the attention of the voters to the difficult present financial condition of the city of Boston. It should be the prime issue of the campaign to tell the people of Boston the serious condition of the city's finances. Boston is not bankrupt—Boston is one of the wealthiest cities in the world. It can escape from its present difficulties if sound business judgment, if honesty and common sense, is applied to the administering of its affairs.

Boston's Debt Is Now $114,000,000.

The net city and county debt of Boston to November 1, 1907, is, in round figures, $71,000,000.

In addition, and this is newsa, news that you do not get in the auditor's reports, Boston's share of the metropolitan debt issued upon the credit of the State, which the taxpayers, wage-earners and people of Boston must pay, principal and intest, is $35,000,000.

Its proportional share of the State debt is over $5,000,000. This is a grand total of indebtedness which the people of Boston must pay, principal and interest—some time they have got to pay it—of $114,000,000—$185 for every man, woman and child in the city of Boston, $1,000 for every registered voter in the city of Boston. In the twelve years from 1895 to November 1, 1907, our populatio nhas increased 22 per cent., our net debt has increased 90 per cent., while our expenditures $7,000,000 a year, one-third of the total amount collected in taxes, to pay the interest and the annual instalment on the principal put into the sinking fund of all the city's indebtedness.

Debt Climbs Under Fitzgerald Regime.

When is this debt going to stop climbing?

Let us go out on the stump, fellow-citizens; let us go around among our neighbors and tell them that the high water mark of the city's debt has been reached in the administration of Mayor Fitzgerald. Let us tell them that the tide will commence to ebb in the administration of Mayor Coulthurst.

What happened under the administration of Mayor Fitzgerald? A net increase of $2,000,000 in the two years 1906 and January 1, 1908. We must tell the people of the financial irresponsibility of the Mayor who, knowing, or being in a position where he ought to know, Boston's financial condition better than any other official, has allowed the city indebtedness to increase $5,000,000 during his term of office, without mentioning the padding of payrolls, the giving out of contracts and jobs to political henchmen, the administration of the city's affairs on an absolutely partisan basis with the principal object of perpetuating himself in power and the building of a personal machine.

We have four weeks in which to complete the thorough education of the voters upon the present situation. The education was commenced some time ago; it showed its effect in the State election, where this personal political machine received a shock from which it has not entirely recovered yet.

Gentlemen, I have tried to outline in a brief way the position that I shall take in the battles that are to come. I ask you one and all to assist and cooperate with me in this difficult task.

It is a singular thing for a man of my age who, up to five weeks ago had a purely local standing in one of the local wards, to be placed by circumstances where he is called upon to lead a public movement for municipal reform, the like of which we have not heretofore seen in the history of the country. We cannot win without working; we cannot win without putting up a hard fight; we have got to organize a fight in every ward, in every precinct of the city of Boston. We have got to let the voters know that we have a platform to stand on; that we mean every word of it, and that if your candidate is elected Mayor he will, with your help and with the help of God, carry out the pledges contained in this platform.

Easy Enough to Preach Reform.

Municipal reform is easy to preach. You have heard candidates for Mayor and other offices preach it, but aside me in preaching municipal reform and then strengthen my arm in carrying out municipal reform, when, after the first day of January, I shall be Mayor of the city of Boston. Let us fight patiently, bravely and faithfully.

Let there be no mud slinging as far as we are concerned. There are enough facts and figures in the present administration for us to rely upon to make a winning fight.

I am confident that the wave of public opinion which triumphantly re-elected John B. Moran to office, with a clear majority of the votes of Suffolk County, will put your candidate in the Mayor's chair.

John A. Coulthurst Mayoralty Candidate, Addressing Independence Leaguers at Meeting of the City Committee Last Night.

Headquarters Crowded at Meeting of the City Committee, Every Ward Being Represented

Outlining his platform as one opposed to machine politics, condemning the present system of awarding city contracts without open competition, and promising the citizens of Boston a clean and honest administration, John A. Coulthurst, candidate for the Independence League mayoralty nomination, last night received an enthusiastic welcome at an open meeting of the city committee at the Independence League headquarters in the Old South building.

Representatives from every ward in the city were present, and the enthusiastic manner in which his remarks were received, coupled with the pledges of support offered, were convincing proof that the Independence League candidate will be an important factor in the coming municipal election.

Headquarters Are Crowded.

The League headquarters were crowded far beyond seating capacity when Secretary Charles O. Power, in the absence of Chairman Robert T. Allen, called the meeting to order. A communication was read from James D. Morgan, Independence League candidate for street commissioner, who was unable to attend through illness, for proposing his name and promised the citizens of Boston a clean, just and honest administration, where every man would be given a fair show and where men would be hired and paid for working for the interests of the citizens of Boston and not to further the personal interests of party bosses.

The following motion condemning the possibility of a dummy candidate presented by hostile interests at the primaries from the Independence League mayoralty nomination, was unanimously adopted:

Moved, That any person obtaining the nomination of the Independence League by subterfuge or fraud be opposed by the city committee, and that every effort be made to expose and defeat such candidate.

John A. Coulthurst was then introduced by Chairman Power as "the next Mayor of Boston." Cheers after cheers followed for minutes the his name, and for fully five to pause until the applause and cheers had quieted down sufficiently for him to be heard.

Outlines League Policy.

When the applause had at last subsided Mr. Coulthurst clearly and concisely outlined the policy of the Independence League in the coming city election and appealed to every voter of Boston who wanted to see the city under a clean, honest and able administration to come across on election day behind the name of the Independence candidate.

Mr. Coulthurst then took up the subject of the financial condition of the city of Boston, and called the attention of his hearers to the enormous increase in the city debt during the present administration. He denied the statement that Boston was bankrupt, and showed them all that was needed to put the finances of the city once more on a firm footing was a clean, able and honest administration.

He pointed out the fact that the city debt was at the present time at least $1,000 for each enrolled voter and $185 for each man, woman and child in the city. The fact that the expenditures was still increasing was offered as proof that no economy whatever, a change was necessary at City Hall. Mr. Coulthurst promised the citizens of Boston that if he is elected Mayor that the city debt will be decreased and that useless expenditures and graft berths for party bosses will be discontinued the moment he takes his seat in City Hall.

Cheers for League Leaders.

As a proof of the growing discontent among the members of the old parties Mr. Coulthurst referred to the recent victories of John B. Moran and Michael J. McEttrick, and the wonderful vote polled by Thomas L. Hisgen. He mentioned each of the League candidate's names and received cheers with each.

In conclusion Mr. Coulthurst warned the members of the Independence League of the possibility of some dummy candidate being introduced for the purpose of stealing the League nomination for Mayor, and asked them to enroll and attend the primaries so that by their votes they could place in the mayoralty contest the real nominee of the Independence League and defeat any subterfuge candidate offered by the opposing machines.

MILK PRODUCERS DEMAND GUILD REMOVE OFFICIALS

STATE AUTHORITIES HAMPER THE FARMERS' MOVEMENT, THEY DECLARE.

The Worcester County milk producers, following an investigation by their committee in Boston yesterday, will go to Governor Guild with the request that he remove certain State officials who are hampering the farmers' movement to send their milk to Boston in competition with the contractors.

"I shall not be satisfied," declared Jonas Bemis of Charlton to-day, "until some of the present officials of some of the departments dealing with agriculture are removed from office, and if such men continue to be appointed, the whole state of legislation and government should be watched.

"The dairymen of this State are going to know who is for them and who is against them; and if they find that certain officials refuse to take up the fight for the farmer, or work underhanded, they need not feel put out if somebody happens at the polls next year that will change the whole political situation in Massachusetts.

Urge Governor Act.

"The request of the dairy people of Massachusetts is that the Governor take action at once, and have guilty officials removed immediately.

"That will help clear the way so that the farmer can have a fair show to sell his own product at a reasonable price," Charles W. Wood of Worcester, chairman of the milk producers' mass meeting, declared to-day that he had received a letter from George Albree which "brings home to us what the farmers have to contend with when the contractors of Boston sets. I am of the opinion that those producers who can afford to do so should refuse to sell their milk to these defiant contractors. But I am equally strong in the conviction that any producer who is able to suffer serious financial embarrassment by keeping his milk back for a few months and can afford to send his milk to Boston for a few months, remembering that plans are being matured and efforts will continue till the Massachusetts farmers are emancipated from the bondage they now suffer at the hands of combined avarice."

Demand Full Investigation.

Mr. Albree, in his letter, said:

"I would also urge that immediate steps be taken in addition to the work being done by the Board of Railroad Commissioners to bring to the attention of His Excellency, Governor Guild, information now in your possession as to the inactivity of the State authorities who are charged with the responsibility of caring for our agricultural and dairy interests.

"There is necessity for a full investigation to see to whether the State Board of Health through its officers and agents has allowed the Boston contractors and other dealers for months to sell milk below the commercial standard as fixed by law, while it has allowed at the same time the contractor to demand milk at a higher commercial standard from the farmer than the contractor has been permitted to sell to the consumer. This investigation need not wait for the appointment of a special commission, but should be instituted at once."

MILLS CLOSE; THOUSANDS ARE OUT OF EMPLOYMENT

REPORTS COME FROM ALL NEW ENGLAND OF SUDDEN DEPRESSION OF INDUSTRY.

WORCESTER, Nov. 12.—The American Steel & Wire Works, which is said to be involved in the troubles of the Westinghouse company at Pittsburg, notified 150 of its employes to-day that their services would not be required after next Saturday. Last Saturday the company laid off the same number of men. The company operates two great plants here.

The Vocation Organ Company posted notice at its factory to-day that, beginning Thursday, the working day would be cut to seven hours.

A crowd of 200 men, women and children gathered at the State Employment Bureau at No. 8 Kneeland street to-day as a testimony to business depression and the curtailment in the demand for labor. Now, for the first time since the bureau was established, Superintendent Walter L. Sears states, there are more demands for work than there are demands for people to fill jobs. There is at present, compared with a few months ago, a falling off of 50 per cent in the applications of employers for men and women to work for them.

It is not long since that from forty to 120 requests for "help" came to the bureau daily. Now the daily number of places offered people who want jobs is from twenty to sixty. The bureau is able to supply help for any occupation. It would be hard to conceive of a job that Superintendent Sears could not find a man, woman or child to fill. But the trouble he is having now is to find jobs for applicants for work. He used to have to hustle to get people for the jobs. He is now turning away hundreds who want employment. The demand for labor is sluck.

Depression in Business.

"The reason for the present condition," said Superintendent Sears, "is unsual quiet in business circles for this time of year. Financial depression, the curtailment of production in certain lines of trade and overproduction in others have all contributed to bring this state of affairs. People who have jobs are holding on to them. This is always a tendency when Winter approaches, but it is more emphasized than usual now. Of course this leaves fewer vacancies to be filled.

"There is still a fair demand for agricultural laborers, domestic help, factory hands and boys. But hundreds of strong, able bookkeepers, salesmen, office clerks, clerks, shippers and farmers are calling upon the bureau for work when there is no demand for them.

"Almost all who call at the State Bureau for a look book to prepare, advertisers and capable. Superintendent Sears says that his office is an accurate barometer of good times and bad.

Payrolls Cut Down.

Stringency in the money market has forced manufacturers to cut down payrolls. They find it hard to raise money to pay hands. From 5,000 to 10,000 factory employes in New England are now out of work, or working shorter time. Taking the minimum of an average of three to a family, this shows from 15,000 to 30,000 affected.

At Maynard about 2,000 hands are affected by the closing of spinning, carding and weaving departments in the Assabet mills. They will reopen on Monday.

At Marlboro, 2,200 Rice & Hutchins's shoe factory employes have just begun to work on a half time schedule.

At Worcester 100 Crompton and Knowles loom works hands are laid off.

At Westboro the Hunt leather goods, the H. E. Brigham shoe and the Hassall lace curtain plants are running on short time with a reduced number of employes.

At Middleboro the George E. Keith factory has begun to run on a seven-hour day basis. Leonard and Barrows are running their factory on a nine hour a day.

In some sections for two weeks past it has been so hard to obtain enough small denomination currency to pay off hands that a premium of from two to four per cent. has been paid by manufacturers with big payrolls. This has also been at a premium.

From Providence, R. I., comes the report that many of the jewelry factories have been cut down to an eight-hour day, thousands being affected.

The Claremont, N. H., Sullivan Machinery Co. has curtailed the working day to eight hours. One thousand employes are affected.

From Portland, Me., it is reported that the Main Central railroad repair shops in that city and Waterville have dropped sixty-two men from their payrolls.

BOSTON NIECE TO FIGHT WILL OF MILLIONAIRE

Miss Maria B. Shepard Demands Share in $1,000,000 Estate Left by Dr. Shepard.

Declaring that she is going to contest the will of her uncle, Dr. A. Warner Shepard, who died some weeks ago somewhat mysteriously leaving a bride of four months at his home in Shore road, Brooklyn, Miss Maria B. Shepard, who is employed at No. 61 Washington street, this city and lives at Reading, to-day refused to lift the veil of mystery that covers the case.

"Everything is in the hands of my attorney in Brooklyn," she said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "I do not wish to discuss the case further than this.

Miss Shepard has recently secured apartments at No. 51 East Thirtieth street, Brooklyn, where she will stay while the will is being contested.

Dr. Shepard was a brother of Dr. Luther Shepard, who lives at the Hotel Brunswick in this city. When Dr. Benjamin Briggs of Willoughby street, Brooklyn, an old friend, declared that Dr. A. Warner Shepard's death was mysterious, that he had been hounded by a woman who claimed to be his daughter, Dr. Shepard of Boston declared that a great mistake had been made.

Mrs. Anna Kessler of No. 443 Seventh street, Brooklyn, has filed a claim for $50,000 against the $4,000,000 estate left by Dr. Shepard.

Dr. Shepard's death was as mysterious as had been the greater part of his life. He had been for years one of the leading physicians of Brooklyn and when in the young soldier, who had lived in the same house with him for twenty-three years, announced that his heart failure had carried off her husband at the age of seventy-five.

The inquest held by the Coroner showed that Dr. Warner had died of morphine poisoning and then his doctors reported that he had used the drug excessively and that he had died of an overdose.

GLADYS AND COUNT TO SEE HORSE SHOW

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12.—Miss Gladys Vanderbilt and Count Szechenyi have decided to attend the horse show in New York next week. They will leave Newport by train and will stay at Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's, New York house, which will be especially opened for them.

ANNUAL MEETING NOV. 14.

The annual meeting of the Associated Charities of Boston will be held on Thursday evening in Steinert Hall, No. 162 Boylston street. James Brenton Reynolds of New York and Washington will talk on "Temperament in Economic Dependence." Dr. Charles F. Putnam, vice-president of the society, will preside, and the annual report will be presented by Mr. Jeffrey H. Brackett.

PRICES UP AT OPENING OF MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The stock market opened at almost general gains. Pennsylvania started ⅝ better, Reading ¼ and to sell ⅜, Northern Pacific ½ and to sell ⅝, Atchison ⅝, Rock Island ⅝, Mexican Central and Steel common ⅝. Steel preferred ¼, Colorado Fuel opened ½ lower and St. Paul ¼ to sell ⅜ higher, while Anaconda and General Electric were unchanged at the end of ten minutes' trading. The market was irregular.

NEW CANADIAN DIOCESE.

ROME, Nov. 12.—The congregation of the propaganda has decided to create the vicariate apostolic of Saskatchewan, one of the new provinces of Northwest Canada, to a bishopric and change its name to Prince Albert.

WALSH TO-DAY ARRAIGNED AS BANK LOOTER

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—John R. Walsh, railroad magnate and millionaire faced the Federal Court to-day to answer charges of the defalcation of $15,000,000. Because of former associations with the banker, Judge Landis, of Standard Oil fame, refused to hear the case, and Judge Anderson of Indianapolis presided in the stead.

Besides all the influences of his great wealth, the power of politicians who claim to believe in his innocence and others who are suspected of having profited by his financial deals, Walsh has an army of counsel including John R. Miller, "the $100,000 Standard Oil attorney," Judge Hynes and others.

Three assistants in the district attorney's office will fight them.

Walsh is under two indictments of more than 150 counts for the alleged looting of the banks.

McFADDEN JAILED.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 12.—Bernard McFadden, publisher of a physical culture magazine, convicted of circulating improper literature, has been scattered in the United States Court here to two years' imprisonment and $2,000 fine.

Mrs. Bradley Facing Death Trial Shields Name of Man She Slew

WOMAN ACCUSED OF MURDER STILL LOYAL TO MEMORY OF SENATOR BROWN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 12.—"Every night she takes the Senator's picture down from the wall of her cell and kisses it good night."

Judge Orlando Powers, chief counsel for Mrs. Annie A. Bradley, who to-day will face the court to answer for the death of former Senator Brown of Utah, thus described last night the affection that his client retains for the memory of her victim.

"She still holds sacred the memory of the man who caused her all this trouble and anguish," said the lawyer. "I have found it very difficult, even now, when she is on trial for her life, to get her to say anything that will cast reflection on him. Really vital incidents, big enough to sway the jury, she has kept from us up to the last two days."

Such is the complex nature of the woman who did not hesitate, less than a year ago, to shoot down the man who enjoined her honorable marriage, after he had visited upon her the deepest wrongs.

As to Mrs. Bradley herself, this is the view she takes of the matter:

"If my attorneys succeed in making the jury see the case as I see it," she said to-day, "I am content and have no doubt as to the result."

She had just returned to the district jail after suffering the disappointment of having her trial postponed until Wednesday morning, because of the death yesterday of Justice McComas, of the District Court of Appeals.

Longs for End of Ordeal.

Tractable and complacent up to now, Mrs. Bradley is beginning to chafe under the delay of bringing her to trial.

"I have waited so long," she said to-day, "that I am willing to face the verdict, whatever it may be, if the ordeal can only be brought to an end."

Whether Mrs. Bradley shall take the witness stand in her own defense is a problem that her counsel is still pondering over.

The defence will be one of insanity, not emotional insanity, nor the unwritten law, nor any of the subterfuges that the lawyers are wont to resort to in such cases.

"There will be none of that in this trial," Mr. Powers said to-night. "We are prepared to prove that Mrs. Bradley was insane—truly insane—and there will be no mention of the 'unwritten law' at least on our side of the case."

In this connection, counsel for Mrs. Bradley to-day prevailed upon the Government to bear the expense of bringing to Washington—for the accused woman is practically destitute—Lionel Shrewsbury of California, Mrs. Bradley's uncle by marriage, who will swear that her father's sister spent the last years of her life in the California State Insane Asylum. The witness will testify that Mrs. Bradley's paternal aunt had frequent periods of madness, during which she would threaten the lives of those near and dear to her.

Mr. Powers told the AMERICAN correspondent to-day that he regarded this witness as of great importance to his case.

Mrs. Bradley May Testify.

But, though counsel for the defence is anxious to avail itself of the effect that Mrs. Bradley's appearance would have on the witness stand, in view of their decision to rely wholly on a plea of insanity, they hesitate about calling her. Opinion here, however, inclines to the belief that Mrs. Bradley will be called.

"We are not sure," said Mr. Powers today, "that if Mrs. Bradley does go on the stand she will tell the whole story of her infatuation for Senator Brown from the time she first met him up to the time of his death. She will go even further back than that, and tell of her life from the time that she reached an age of discretion—of her first marriage, the circumstances of her divorce—all that will in any way shed light on the fact with which she stands charged.

"When the public hears the whole story its heart will be wrung at the thought of the humiliation and sorrow this woman of refinement and culture suffered for years—all because of her love for a heedless man."

But if Mrs. Bradley is to be tried solely on the issue of her sanity, it doesn't follow that the former Senator will be allowed to read between the lines.

In court yesterday for the few minutes that she was in the presence of Judge Stafford, was little Montgomery Brown, four years old, and Arthur Brown, Jr., seven years old. Time and time again these innate supplications to their mother for a name and heritage elsewhere had made the shots that laid the former Senator low.

Little Sons at Mother's Side.

These boys, and the mother of the accused, will be constantly at her side during the trial. Counsel for the defence say they will give mute testimony before the jury that the prosecution will be unable to contradict.

One does not have to take sides in the case to see the pathos of this little family group, and, after all, it is around these that the trial, once under way, will revolve.

They spent practically the whole day with Mrs. Bradley in the cheerless jail. Mrs. Maddison, the matron, and her two grandsons.

Last night Arthur Brown, Jr., occupied the seat of honor in a box at a local theatre. Little Montgomery spent the night with his mother in the prison. He had the run of the corridor all day, but when his eyes grew heavy and sleep began to overcome him, a turnkey gathered him up and the ensuing click of the lock in an iron grated door left the boy clasped in the arms of his mother, who is to begin tomorrow the ordeal of trial for the slaying of down his father. Poor little innocent! He doesn't know. For the past few days he has had the free run of the jail and has been an unobserved listener to all the interviews about conviction, acquittal, evidence and the like, that have occurred between counsel and client.

Boy Plays Soldier in Jail.

Mrs. Bradley was brought back to jail yesterday, and while she talked with some visitors, Montgomery played around their feet. Her big brown eyes sought her youngest born as the child romped at play, and the tragic gleam in them faded to a soft glow of motherhood as she stroked his hair. The boy dragged himself loose from her grasp and, mounting on play soldier march up and down the corridor of the jail, a toy gun hung over his shoulder.

"Where did you get your gun, Montgomery?" asked one of the visitors.

"Lady gave it to me," he replied.

"When?"

"Oh jus' about the time of the shooting." The mother, who is soon to undergo trial for her life for the shooting," paled and stifled a cry as she turned away from her boy's wondering eyes.

There was a big crowd on hand in Criminal Court No. 1 when the case was called yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Bradley was brought in, attired wholly in black. Every inch a lady, calling her counsel to remained in the chamber with her head bowed. There was no sign of nervousness about her, nor did she give way to any emotion. She occupied herself, as she wish to avoid the gaze of the crowd, and she uttered a sigh of relief when she was back in the retiring room again.

Two Little Sons for Whose Sake Mrs. Bradley Shot Senator Brown

Arthur and Montgomery Brown, whose father, Mrs. Bradley claims, was Senator Brown. His refusal to give them his name drove her to madness, her lawyers declare, and she shot Brown while in this mental state.

ASK STATE BOARD TO PROBE BRIDGE DELAY

BOYLSTON STREET MERCHANTS APPEAL TO RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS TO ACT.

Angry at the delay in the work of reconstruction on the Boylston street bridge, merchants doing business in that vicinity, persons who live on the Massachusetts avenue side of the bridge, and proprietors of hotels and lodging houses are going to demand that the Massachusetts Railroad Commission begin an investigation at once.

A petition calling for the investigation is being circulated and already contains the names of hundreds of persons, who represent property and business valued at millions of dollars.

Here is a copy of the petition:

Petitioners' Plea.

"We, the undersigned firms, individuals and corporations doing business on Boylston, and streets adjacent, in the immediate vicinity of the Boylston street railroad bridge, respectfully represent to the Board of Railroad Commissioners of the Commonwealth, that the delay in making the repairs upon said bridge has caused and is causing great inconvenience and loss to your petitioners, and that if the delay continues further, more severe loss will be suffered by them, and their business permanently damaged; that they are informed and believe that there has been unnecessary delay in the completion of said repairs, and that they believe there will be further delay unless some action is taken by your honorable board; wherefore your petitioners pray that the Board of Railroad Commissioners will cause an investigation to be made forthwith in the above matter."

Business Men Sign.

Among the signers of the petition are the following having property interests in Boylston street: Albert Roff, No. 751; H. C. & C. D. Castle, Inc., No. 823; the Hills-Kenedy Company, No. 733; Joseph E. Bellveau, No. 419; Walter Gordon Laboratory Company; George M. Walker; M. A. Driscoll, No. 715; J. H. McSwain, No. 715; J. H. Hunt, No. 747; W. S. Bigelow, Jr., No. 687; Thomas F. Galvin, Dr. Joseph A. Galvin; John Goepper; Charles F. Kirtland, No. 683 (Kensington Building); Roswell Parish, Jr., Brookline; Roger Derby, Rivershak court; Lewis Hotel Company; Graham and Streeter, No. 760; H. H. Thomas Company, No. 727; Sampson-Sawyer Company, No. 731; Casper Bohn, No. 749; Massachusetts Automobile Club, No. 761; the Maguire Company, Nos. 743 and 745; Frank O. Guild, No. 695; Franklin Auto Company. The following signed from other addresses: A. E. Steer, No. 79 Milk and No. 209 Newbury; Joseph J. Megill, No. 313 Newbury; Orcutt & Elwell, No. 51 Fairfield; Parker Kyes, No. 408 Fairfield; George T. Cruft, No. 258 Commonwealth avenue; Arthur W. Sanders, No. 58 Winchester; Sirvan J. Valentine and A. dePiccolella, Park Hilda Club; Arthur Vignoles, Chestnut Hill; H. B. Temby, Park street, Brookline.

"Promises; No Results."

These names were added to the petition to-day: G. Brewer Smith, A. William Keyes, Dr. Frederick H. Bigelow, George E. Fitzgerald, Roland H. Sherman, Waldo H. Marshall, Edward W. Soule, George Washington Crane and F. H. Kidder.

Engineers engaged at the work of reconstruction declared today that when it was begun the bridge was in such a condition that they feared that it did not fall and cause great loss of life.

According to one of the engineers, one track will be ready for use over the bridge by Nov. 25, but this is doubted by the merchants and others in the vicinity.

"It is the same old story," said one of them. "We get lots of promises but no results."

MAYOR GUEST OF STREET MEN AT ANNUAL BALL

The Street Cleaning Employes' Protective Association held its first annual ball in Paine Memorial Hall last night.

At about 10:30 Mayor Fitzgerald and Commissioner Cummings arrived and made short addresses. The Mayor complimented the association on its fine showing, and claimed that the street cleaning department was never in a more efficient condition than at the present time. Representative William P. Higgins was also a guest of the evening.

The ball committee consisted of Thomas Keenan, James Gearner, Thomas Dahill, William Keenan, John J. Quinn, Edward Grum, William J. Kelly and Brian McGowen. Mr. McGowan, who is financial secretary of the association, was chairman of the committee, and received the congratulations of all on the success of the ball, the net receipts of which will be between $150 and $200.

The reception committee consisted of President Patrick Kellard, Vice-President William O'Maily, Recording Secretary Michael Williams, Treasurer Joseph H. Donnelon and Financial Secretary Brian McGowan.

PHELAN SURE OF WINNING FOR COUNCIL

That Thomas F. Phelan who is backed by Senator-Elect Michael J. McDitrick, will receive the Democratic nomination for the Common Council in Ward 17 in Thursday's caucuses is indicated by the assurance of support on the part of individual voters and various political clubs throughout the ward.

Mr. Phelan's principles have appealed to the people at large, especially at this time when the Curley ward machine is disrupted. His friends claim that this is the year for success to crown his candidacy. This is his third try for the place. He received 800 votes last year.

That the young men of the ward will vote solidly for Mr. Phelan primary day seems manifest. They intimate that the ward is in need of a councilman of his stamp in the City Government. The friends of Senator-Elect Michael J. McDitrick all stand by Mr. Phelan and are urging his nomination.

"I will give the best that is in me to bring honor and respect to the people of the ward," said Mr. Phelan in speaking of his candidacy to-day, "and will so shape my course that my acts will meet with their hearty approval.

"The greatest ambition of any young man is to receive the assurances of his friends that they consider he has great ability to represent them in the affairs of the city.

"I have great admiration for all young men who aspire for public office and feel that the voters are willing to decide fairly on the qualifications of those who come before them for inspection.

"My case is known to them. I trust in their fairness to do the right thing on Thursday next."

WIRE VICTORY PROVED COSTLY TO COMPANIES

—PRESIDENT BEATTIE

The official notice from President W. W. Beattie of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, calling off the strike against the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies was received to-day in Boston.

President Beattie says: "A large majority of the locals voting having declared in favor of the resolution mailed to all locals on Wednesday, the strike against the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies and the Associated Press, is hereby officially declared suspended, effective 12 o'clock noon Saturday, November 9, 1907. All strikers who may desire are free to seek reinstatement in their former positions."

In the first communication which was sent to all of the striking locals it was said that "since the unfortunate episode of October 12 donations from affiliated unions and other sympathizers have dwindled until they have almost ceased, despite determined and concerted efforts to again enlist their financial assistance of our friends. A large percentage of the strikers having reached the limit of self sacrifice and endurance in this noble struggle and without prospect for material or financial assistance, we feel that our moral responsibilities to the incumbent conditions now existing.

"While the companies may boast that they have defeated us, truthfulness would compel them to add the words of Virginia, a famous Roman general, who won a hard-fought battle:

"'If we have such another victory we are undone.'"

KEEP OUT OF POLITICS; ARCHBISHOP WARNS K. C.

Prelate Points Out Danger to Organization at Lecture in Chickering Hall.

"If you go into politics and insist upon destroying yourselves, then I shall have nothing whatever to do with you," declared Most Rev. William H. O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, to a representative audience of Knights of Columbus in introducing Rev. Father Pardow at Chickering Hall who lectured on "The Catholic Church Before the Tribunal of Reason."

Significant applause that burst spontaneously from all parts of the large hall to be repeated three times before silence was restored greeted this portion of the allocution of the head of the archdiocese of Boston.

The archbishop earnestly spoke of the force of the new educational movement of which the series of lectures to be delivered here by Father Pardow. When the great burst of applause, repeated three times had died away at last, the archbishop continued:

"I am glad to have said these words. Your warm approval shows you feel as I do on this matter. This morning I read in the newspapers a statement made by a Protestant clergyman in his pulpit on Sunday evening in which this gentleman said that Boston is a Catholic city.

"Is Boston a Catholic city? Mere numbers alone will not make it so. It is the lives of the people. If we lead moral, religious lives and strive for high ideals, then only can we lay claim to such distinction. Our men of education and letters should aim at high ideals and then will the thousands true and influential leaders in every good cause in the Commonwealth."

The lecture by Father Pardow, the first of the series of five was a scholarly exposition of his theme, "The Catholic Church Before the Tribunal of Reason; Its Legal and Social Standing."

CLUB DOCTOR ORDERED RUM

BANGOR, Nov. 12.—Peter J. Curran, steward for the Fraternal Order of Eagles, here has been discharged by Judge Chapman on the charge of selling liquor in the clubrooms, but was held on the charge of maintaining a nuisance.

A feature of the defence was that the liquors were ordered by the medical examiner, the property of the club members were, therefore, not sold.

CASE PUZZLES PHYSICIANS

Edward F. Hern, aged twenty-one, and son of Denis J. Hern, formerly Health Commissioner, on the dangerous list at City Hospital, where he is suffering from a fractured skull as the result of a fall from an electric car, is puzzling the physicians, as his temperature has been as high as 105 5-10, and his pulse is but fifty-six. Ordinarily the pulse goes twice as high in such cases when the temperature reaches 102 or more. The doctors fear unusual brain affection.

DRUNKS FEW; LAY OFF 4 POLICEMEN

It has been one week since a drunken man has been arrested in Somerville, and according to Captain Robert Ferry, it is the first time in the history of the city that the officers have gone so long without locking up any one for drunkenness.

Already four officers have been laid off because of the lack of work.

BOMBS IN VLADIVOSTOK.

VLADIVOSTOK, Nov. 12.—Bombs, arms, ammunition and correspondence of a revolutionary organization, including in its membership soldiers belonging to the naval garrison, have been seized in the naval workshops here.

GROVER TAKES SON HUNTING

PRINCETON, Nov. 12.—Accompanied by his young son, Richard, ex-President Grover Cleveland retained his old-time record of shooting the first rabbit of the season in the woods near Princeton. The boy, who inherits his father's love of hunting and skill, got several rabbits. Mr. Cleveland stood his trip so well that he plans to make another very soon. Young Cleveland thinks there must be as much fun shooting rabbits as in shooting bears.

NOTED SEEDSMAN DEAD.

DETROIT, Nov. 12.—Dexter M. Ferry, head of one of the largest seed firms in the United States, which bore his name, and prominent in local business enterprises, was found dead in bed at his home this morning.

President Gompers Sounds Warning to Union Men

URGES OPEN WAR ON WAGE CUT

CONVENTION IS OPENED AT NORFOLK

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 12.—The annual convention of the American Federation of Labor opened yesterday, for a session of two weeks, in the Auditorium at the Exposition, where the day was celebrated as "American Federation of Labor Day."

In the presence of 4000 delegates, including representatives from Cuba, Canada and Mexico and every member of the Federation's Executive Council, with the exception of John Mitchell, head of the miners, an invalid, President Gompers declared the meeting open. Addresses of welcome were made by Governor Swanson, President Tucker of the Exposition, and others.

Arthur A. Hay, representative of the International Typographical Union at Los Angeles, is here to ask the Federation to manage and finance on behalf of labor the fight now being waged between the Citizens' Alliance Union of Los Angeles and trade unions there.

"No Wage Reduction."

President Gompers suggested in his annual report the slogan, "No Wage Reduction." Under the caption "Contempt the Capitalist Antagonism, It Will Not Prevail," he describes the National Association of Manufacturers, tells how J. W. Van Cleave of St. Louis proposed an anti-labor war fund of $1,500,000, to be devoted, the president declared, to the effort to weaken, cripple and destroy labor unions, and continued:

"I am reliably informed that not less than 12,000 secret detective agents of the Pinkerton and other companies are constantly in the pay of the manufacturers' associations to spy upon and misrepresent the doings of labor.

"Hireling Assassins."

"Are these hireling character assassins to be the principal beneficiaries of the million and a half dollar war fund, and is the fund to be further devoted to carry on all suits at law against organized labor so as to engage our organizations and our men in defensive litigation and to divert us from the imminent and important work to which we should devote our time and whatever ability with which we may be possessed? Surely, recent events justify an affirmative answer.

"Strife is to be peace, fun or war, we will all be there."

The report classifies Mr. Gompers's familiar protest against "government by injunction," a statement of the great growth of the order, of plans for extension of the work of defense of charity, for the union shop, against child labor, for the eight-hour day, for the organization of farmers, the restriction of ignorant and otherwise undesirable immigrants and for the union label.

"NO REDUCTION IN WAGES IS LABOR MAN'S SLOGAN"

—Samuel Gompers.

"The assent of the workmen to wage reductions as a means to what the old school terms the way out of an industrial reaction or crisis is economically unsound.

"In gathering of labor, 'No reductions in wages' is the slogan.

"The shrinkage has occurred not upon actual tangible values, but upon inflated or watered stocks.

"In former times these shrinkages were forced upon the toilers, but our princes of finance cannot influence employers of labor to hazard an attempt at wage reductions.

"If all labor will unfalteringly adhere to the determination to resist any and all reductions in wage we shall not only avoid the misery, poverty and calamity of the past, but we shall teach financiers and economists in general a new philosophy of life and industry."—President of the American Federation of Labor at Norfolk, Va.

GOMPERS WARNS WORKMEN

Special to the Boston American.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 12.—Urging upon labor to fight to the last ditch any effort to relieve the country's financial stringency by wage reductions, President Gompers made this warning keynote of his annual address to the American Federation of Labor here:

"If all labor will unfalteringly adhere to this we shall avoid the misery, poverty and calamity of the past," he said.

Mr. Gompers delivered a broadside against "government by injunction," denied categorically that labor unions were a trust, attacked the sulp subsidy and discussed all pending labor legislation. He said that organized labor sympathized deeply with the union telegraphers, but that the strike was inopportune. He said he advised against a strike.

He declared:

"It may not be amiss to bear in mind that of all those who will have their attention directed to this convention, none will be more keen and alert than those who are either our open or covert antagonists. The so-called National Association of Manufacturers and industrial alliances and "industrial workers," with their Pinkerton agencies, their legal lynxes and hirelings, are always on the qui vive and crouching to take advantage of and leap upon labor for any mistake which it may make. They will distort, misrepresent and exaggerate it, not only to the general public but to our own fellow-workers, to prejudice both against us, our movement and our cause. That our cause, our work and our words may disappoint and confound them and bring enlightenment and encouragement to our fellows and our friends, is my most earnest wish.

Big Gain in Membership.

President Gompers announced that the American Federation of Labor issued 573 charters during the fiscal years and now had affiliated with it the following: International unions, 117; State federations, 37; city central bodies, 574; local trade and federal labor unions, 661. The secretaries of 112 international unions reported that they issued charters to 2,048 newly organized unions and there had been an increase of 188,373 in the membership in the organizations comprising the Federation.

"Let pessimists and opponents take unction to their souls for their mastership of the past. The present and the future are for labor, which in its organized, federated movement will stand as a protest against injustice and wrong toward any of our fellow-men, as the vanguard to proclaim and achieve the rights to which the toilers, the masses, are entitled.

"The American workmen in return for their services to society demand a living wage, a constantly growing minimum living wage.

"There is no factor so potent to secure the just demands of labor as a well organized union with a goodly treasury.

"In the endeavor to secure the just demands of labor without a strike a sense of justice on the part of employers cannot be compared to a well-organized body of workmen with a well-filled treasury, and in their so potent an influence as power to prevent a lockout as labor intelligently and prudently organized is powerful to defend its rights.

"After all, labor cannot place its entire reliance upon the enthusiasm of its men. It is a truism that when want enters the door enthusiasm flies out of the window. Our unions should establish a higher or higher dues and greater benefits for their members.

The $1,500,000 War Fund.

"In connection with the subject of the 'equity and demand' as governing the wages and hours of labor, your attention is called to the fact that for quite a period of years we have not heard the clarion of the inexorability of this law discussed, particularly so far as its application to labor is concerned. My purpose in addressing myself to this is to first your attention to the fact that the improvement in our lives and in our homes is due to the organized effort of the working people of this country and to them alone.

"I refer to the creation of the anti-labor war fund of $1,500,000 of the National Association of Manufacturers in the following terms:

"I am reliably informed that not less than 12,000 secret detective agents of the Pinkerton and other companies are constantly in the pay of the manufacturers' associations to spy upon and misrepresent the doings of labor.

Arguments Extended.

"Are these hireling character assassins to be the principal beneficiaries of the million and a half dollar war fund, and is the fund to be further devoted to suits at law against organized labor so as to engage our organizations and our men in defensive litigation and to divert us from the imminent and important work to which we should devote our time and whatever ability with which we may be possessed? Surely, recent events justify an affirmative answer.

"Our movement has to contend with the most vicious, greedy and ignorant of the conspirators upon the proposition of the trade agreement. It also has the opposition of the short-sighted as well as that malicious element which hides behind a pretended friendship for labor.

"As directed by you I have endeavored to obtain fullest possible information regarding the conditions of employment in the construction of the Panama Canal. Much progress has been made, but conditions show that much improvement is necessary for civilized life. It is estimated beyond question that generally those in authority at Panama have manifested their hostility to the consideration of the workmen's grievances when presented as an entity, an organized body.

Purpose to Aid Government.

"The reports from there, and these not only the reports from labor men, show that the hours of labor in the Panama Canal construction range from twelve to fourteen a day, and this, too, in the midst of great excavating in a tropical zone of unhealthful atmosphere of Panama.

"The humane work in organized and conducted by the labor movement to eliminate child labor, the unhealthful and commercial affairs of our country has borne good fruit and is destined to bring still better results.

"To-day there is not an institution in our country but which is committed in some way to the abolition of child labor.

"There may be a world of superficial sympathy doled out by philanthropists for the women and girls who are compelled to earn their own livelihood, but it is the oft much-abused trade union movement which stands for the recognition of their rights, political, social, moral and industrial, and which demands for them equal pay for equal work.

Contempt Case Jury Trials.

Mr. Gompers devoted much attention to the position of organized labor upon the anti-injunction proposition. He declared Secretary Taft's recent speech on the subject "entirely unprovoked, unnecessary and wholly gratuitous, and still unfounded."

"From other sources, we may expect malicious misrepresentation, but from high officials of our Government, never."

He stated the organization's position, briefly, as follows:

"We re-assert that we ask no immunity for ourselves or for any other man who may be guilty of any unlawful or criminal act; but we have a right to insist, and we do insist, that when a workman is charged with a crime or any unlawful conduct, he shall be accorded every right, be apprehended and tried by the same process of law as any other citizen of our country."

Dr. Greene's NERVURA BLOOD and NERVE REMEDY

Rheumatism

Dr. Greene's Nervura cures Rheumatism because it purifies the blood. Rheumatism and Neuralgia are mere diseases of the blood and nerves. With pure blood and strong nerves rheumatism simply disappears.

Rheumatism tortures and twists, rheumatism causes intense suffering and robs its victims for either business or pleasure. Neuralgia always indicates a run-down condition of the system. Dr. Greene's Nervura builds up your health and strength. It will cure your rheumatism. Try it and be convinced.

Mrs. Mary Meehan, of West Concord, N.H., says:

"I was severely afflicted with rheumatism for more than six months. Muscles and joints were stiff and painful, and I was unable to move quite freely. At times it was with great difficulty I could get about the house.

Having heard of the great benefit my husband derived from Dr. Greene's Nervura I concluded to resort to it. To my great joy it was completely successful. By the use of only three bottles I was entirely cured, and have been in perfect health ever since."

If you are nervous or all run down Dr. Greene's Nervura will make you well. It restores youthful good looks.

Dr. Greene may be consulted free of charge either by letter or personally at his office, 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass.

MAKES THREE BASE HIT AND WINS BRIDE

Timely Batting of Dorchester Young Man Leads to the Altar.

TRUE BASEBALL ROMANCE

Harold Heald of Dorchester has just returned from his honeymoon with the fair bride whom he won by making a three-base hit at a crucial time in a ball game.

Of course, it was not just the three-base hit alone that captured the heart of the bride, formerly Miss Bertha Matilda Van Schoppe of West Somerville. The hit was the game and created in an acute interest in the stalwart batsman in the heart of Miss Van Schoppe, who was fervently anxious for Heald's side to win. This interest, on further acquaintance, led to mutual admiration, and in the end, Dan Cupid took a hand and scored a home run.

Heald is twenty-seven years old and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert V. Heald of No. 22 Eastman street, Dorchester. He is a clerk by occupation. His bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. F. Van Schoppe of No. 366 Highland avenue, West Somerville.

A year ago Heald was playing in a baseball game in Worcester. Miss Van Schoppe was one of the spectators. It was neck and neck between the nines. Heald came to the bat. Miss Van Schoppe, wrought up with excitement, called out from the grandstand:

"If he makes a hit, he can wear my colors home."

Heald heard the remark. He did make a hit, not only with the bat, but an even bigger hit with Miss Van Schoppe. After the game Heald was introduced to Miss Van Schoppe, and a month ago their engagement was announced.

They were married on October 17 at the Church of the Ascension by the Rev. William L. Clark. Now they are just back from the honeymoon and are making their home at present with the bride's parents.

FATHER WEDS THE MOTHER OF SON'S FIANCEE

Holyoke Candy Maker's Marriage Follows His Announcement of Son's Engagement.

PRETTY LITTLE ROMANCE

WORCESTER, Nov. 12.—A pretty romance was brought to its conclusion in the Holy Name of Jesus Church, this city, when Mrs. Ida Duclos of No. 399 Cambridge street was married to Joseph A. Campagna of Holyoke by Rev. J. E. Perreault.

This romance was begun last Summer when Miss Blanche Duclos, a daughter of the bride, passed her vacation at Holyoke and became acquainted with Joseph Campagna, a son of the groom.

Since Miss Duclos returned to Worcester she has been visited by young Campagna on several occasions.

The young people were engaged to be married and the future groom induced his father, who is a wealthy candy dealer, to come to Worcester to visit his future daughter-in-law.

The older Campagna complied with the son's wishes and after he was presented to Miss Duclos was introduced to Mrs. Duclos.

The older couple became attached to each other and since then the elder Campagna has been a visitor at the Duclos home some three times a week.

A short time ago he announced his son's engagement, but never mentioned his own betrothal.

The wedding was a complete surprise to his most intimate friends.

The bride was given away by her father, Louis Closky, and the groom was attended by George Bertrand of Holyoke.

The wedding dinner was served at supper at the home of the bride's parents, after which the couple left for the Jamestown Exposition, where they will pass their honeymoon.

On their return they will live in Holyoke.

OMISSION OF COIN MOTTO CONDEMNED

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Presbyterian Ministers' Association of New York city, held yesterday in the Presbyterian Building at No. 156 Fifth avenue, the Rev. W. J. Peck, pastor of the Union Congregational Church of Corona, L. I., introduced a resolution condemning the omission of the familiar motto, "In God We Trust," from the new five dollar $5 gold piece. The resolution was tabled, but Mr. Peck says he is confident that it will be passed at the next meeting.

DO YOU WANT A COOK?

Cooks are not difficult to get, if you know where to get them.

If you wanted a good horse, you wouldn't go to the bone yards—if you wanted a fine piece of real estate, you wouldn't go to the slums looking for it.

If you want a good cook, you should look where the good cooks advertise. Every day and Sunday there are hundreds of advertisements of cooks printed in THE AMERICAN, under the classification of "Situations Wanted." If the kind of a cook you want is not advertising then you should place an advertisement under "Help Wanted." It will cost you a few cents. Follow these columns and you will get what you want.

THE AMERICAN is the Boston newspaper Which Prints the "Want Advertisements."

QUAKER AUTO SHOW DRAWS BIG CROWD

No Signs of Hard Times at the Exhibition in Philadelphia.

By J. C. KERRISON.

The New York automobile shows were scarcely over before the Philadelphia show opened its doors in the First Regiment Armory on the night of Nov. 2, while the Quaker City automobile exhibition is not quite so large as either of the New York shows, it is comprehensive and representative of the industry.

Despite the cry of hard times there was a tremendous crowd present at the opening of the show, and the majority of the local dealers reported a good demand for cars.

Among the cars exhibited are the Ford, Franklin, Haines, Pierce, Welch, Peerless, Matheson, Pope-Hartford, Cadillac, Baker Matheson, Pope-Hartford, Cadillac, Baker Maxwell, Locomobile, Stearns, Oldsmobile, White, Simplex, Royal, Marmon, Acme, Mitchell, Penn, Apperson, Autocar, Lozier, Premier, Columbia, Rex, Cleveland, American, Mora, Walter, Overland, National, American, Pullman, Jackson, Mercedes, Wagan, Waverly and Carter.

If any one talks hard times to Gaston Plaintif, the popular manager of the Ford company, these days, he simply grins.

It is not surprising that he wears a smile, as on the inside pocket he has a check for $10,000 from the Ford Motor Company of Detroit in payment of his great work last year. This is probably the largest bonus ever paid any sales manager in the history of the automobile trade, and just proves that Plaintif is a good salesman, but also shows that Henry Ford is big and broad enough to appreciate and handsomely reward an employe who has made good.

Twenty-four entries had been received up to last night for the twenty-four-hour road endurance contest which the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club of Newark is to run on Friday and Saturday of this week. The event is to be run over a course of about ninety-one miles, beginning and ending at the Newark headquarters of the club, and silver cups are to be awarded to all owners of cars making perfect scores. The test is limited to members of the promoting organization, and the course is to be covered five times. The start is scheduled for 2 o'clock on Friday afternoon, so the contest will be finished at an early hour on Saturday afternoon. Some of the entrants have asked that the affair be made a sealed-bonnet test also, and the committee is considering the matter. The cars entered are three Maxwells, three Mitchells, two Thomases, two Fords, two Marmons, two Oldsmobiles, and one each of the following makes—Locomobile, Franklin, Matheson, Cadillac, Haynes, Autocar, Pierce-Arrow, Stearns, Ford and Pullman. There is a friendly rivalry between the chauffeurs, as the touring driver will enter a Dragon runabout.

* * *

At a meeting of the show committee of the Importers' Automobile Salon a number of details regarding the coming importers' show at Madison Square Garden, December 28 to January 4, were settled.

By far the greater portion of the available space in the accessories department of the show has been taken, there having been a rush of applicants for space in the galleries and mezzanine floor, while the ground floor of the Garden is practically filled by exhibitors of important machines.

The fact that practically all the cars to be shown will be examples of the highest grade of European makes will tend to render the exhibition a notable one from a mechanical and user's standpoint. The illumination of the Garden will be arranged in an entirely different manner from that of any previous show, the lights being fitted into the building in such a way as to illuminate more distinctly the exhibits rather than the great space at the top.

* * *

After having thoroughly tried out the system at present in use the officers of the Chicago Automobile Club have arrived at the conclusion that the club's plan of regulating chauffeurs is inadequate, and suggestions have been asked for from members of the organization as to the best means of more effectively supplying efficient chauffeurs. What is particularly desired is suggestions as to blank forms to be drawn up upon which chauffeurs would be required to answer questions regarding their experience and qualifications.

Is Father's Value to Child Three Times That of Mother?

A JURY of twelve men at Camden, N. J., has just gone on record in a most remarkable verdict, in which the jurors set forth their belief that a father is worth to a child more than three times as much as a mother.

In awarding damages of $23,000 to Mildred and William Carter, small children, for the loss of their parents in a wreck, the jurors state that $5,000 is for the loss of the mother, and $18,000 for the loss of the father.

Was the jury right in this estimate?

Which is really worth the more to a child, its father or its mother?

What would the verdict have been if the jury had been composed of women?

What is your own opinion on this subject.

Following are various views on this most unusual verdict. Read them and see which, if any, expresses your view of the question.

By H. C. SILVER

THE jury took a proper view of the matter. The father, who was the breadwinner in this instance, was the more valuable asset because he was able to provide for and educate the children.

In the event of the death of the mother alone, he would have been able to purchase the proper care of the children.

The majority of children undoubtedly love the mother more than the father. Perhaps this is because they are with their mother all the time, while their father is busy providing the necessities of life.

Had the father alone been killed, the children would have suffered the mere, be-

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE jury stayed out one hour and then returned a verdict placing the mother's value to her children at $5,000.

If those men had stayed out one year they could never have arrived at a proper estimation of the mother's services to her children.

True, the father was the sole earner, but the mother was the guardian of their smile.

Who can ever take a mother's place in the training of a little child?

Who can take a mother's place in teaching her boy how to distinguish between right and wrong; to show reverence and chivalry toward woman; to be manly, honest and good?

Friends might come forward and help in a monetary way, but money can never take the place of love.

And twelve men, after mature deliberation, have valued the services of such a mother, who went down into the valley of the shadow to bring her babies into the world, at $5,000!

BY CHARLES SOMERVILLE

IF was a horse-sense verdict. It was the man's earning capacity, of course, that figured in making the value his loss to the children at $18,000, and the loss of their mother at only $5,000. In the great loss that the children sustained—the loss of a mother's tenderness and devotion guiding them from childhood to maturity—the law is really powerless to indemnify them. The biggest sum of money on earth couldn't compensate for it. If the jury had given $1,000,000 for their loss the verdict could not stand, so the jury gave what it believed a commercial age would consider fair—$5,000. They were practical men.

HOW TO LOOK YOUNGER THAN YOU REALLY ARE

LESSON III.—MAKING HAIR BLOOM AS A FRAME FOR BEAUTY

How to Shampoo It and Make It Curl Naturally

BY AUGUSTA PRESCOTT

THE woman who lets her hair grow old makes a mistake.

It is unpleasant to the eye.

It feels thin and uncomfortable.

It mars her beauty, for the face is nothing without its frame of shining waves.

And it creates a false impression, for poor hair makes a woman look untidy and badly appointed.

The woman who wants to keep young

Will shampoo her hair until it is free from dust.

Will brush it until it shines.

Will toss it up in glossy coils.

Will dress it modishly.

When hair grows old it loses its color. Then the hair line, which is the dividing mark between the forehead and the hair, begins to go, and finally the hair gets old, dry and scraggly. This is the beginning of extreme old age for any woman.

There are women who keep the hair young. They know how to preserve its color; they keep it shining. They wave it and dress it and comb it. And the result is that they are beautiful women. They are well groomed and delightful to look upon!

Good Hair Spells Youth

If you want nice hair—even in color, pure in texture and lovely throughout—you must take care of it. The hair is so exposed that it gathers dust; it fades in the sun; it grows gray because of ill health, and it becomes out of condition so that it fails out. Take care of your hair if you want to look young and pretty.

If your hair does not please you, there are things that must be done for it at once.

The hair must be washed until free from dirt.

Massage the bare spots back of the ears with the finger tips.

Use a bath spray on the hair. This helps to make the hair light and fluffy.

Scented coffee cap to wear on the morning.

Let down the hair and give the nerves of your head and scalp a rest.

From photographs posed especially for the Boston American.

It must be ventilated until it is dry and sweet smelling.

It must be shaken until it is fluffy, and brushed until it blooms.

Its color must be restored if it has begun to fade.

It must be waved until it has the natural wave of a girl's hair.

And it must be well dressed.

There are women who never learn how to take care of the hair, and these women never look pretty. Dress how they will, smile as they may, study as they can the art of good looks, they still lack the "just something" that constitutes beauty. And this just something is the head of shining hair.

Must Be Made to Bloom

Making the hair bloom is important. There are women who have dull hair. They have never learned how to make the hair shine. They do not understand the trick of making it glossy and wavy at the same time. And the result is a dull head of hair.

Few women know how to shampoo the hair correctly. They do the work too wisely, but too well. They wash every particle of natural oil out of the hair, shampooing it until it fills the straw. For days the hair is unmanageable.

The way to shampoo the head is to wet it thoroughly with warm water. It can then be covered with soap jelly, or soap suds, and the scalp lightly massaged with the finger tips.

Now comes the rinse. Take a bath spray and attach it to the hot water faucet. Moderate the temperature until it is only medium hot, and turn the spray upon the hair, massaging it with the fingers until the soap has disappeared. The process should not take more than seven minutes.

The hair is now ready to be rinsed. This process cannot end with bath spray can take a basin of hot water softened with a tablespoon of borax. Into the lather head is dipped and the soap rinsed off. The basin is now filled again and this time there are added about three drops of quinine to the water and some dissolved borax. The hair is again rinsed, and it still feels soapy the process is repeated until it is free from soap.

The hair should never be rubbed directly with a cake of soap. It will adhere and become unable to wash out. Better to take a soap jelly or a soapy lather. A rubber bath cap is a great assistant in this massage. The secret of nice hair is oil. The scalp supplies a quantity of natural oil, which makes the hair grow.

After the shampoo the hair should be shaken dry. Any one with a very pliable brush until it begins to feel natural to the touch. Then, if soft and lightly handled, will stimulate the roots.

Ventilate It Daily

All hair should be ventilated once a day and the roots gently massaged. The hair can be tossed in the wind a few minutes.

If possible, the locks should be shaken out and allowed to hang for an hour or so. It does the roots a world of good to rest them.

Hair that is straight can be taught to wave, and there are wave directions which every woman should learn.

Teach your hair to lie in becoming curls around your face.

Study your hair line—the line your hair makes across your forehead—and be sure it gets the habit.

Don't use hot irons, but wave it in natural ways. The best preventive for dry hair, but quickly responds to good usage.

If your hair refuses to stay in curl in damp weather, make a curl-line with which to wet it so that the curls will remain. The old-fashioned quince seed lotion is as good as anything.

One Woman's Secret

There is a lovely woman in society whose hair is simply bewildering. Not in color, for it is merely a mouse brown. Not in jewels, for she does not dress her hair with them. But in the way it is dressed; it is its scent. Its odor is delightful.

"What do you put on your hair to make it smell so lovely?" she was asked.

And then she told. For night wear she has a tiny little cap, made of pink silk and trimmed with lace. The lace side is padded with sachet powder. For day wear she has the dearest little cap, which she ties with ribbons in a bow under her chin. The cap is of lightest silk, and in its lining is a delicate sachet which scents her hair, her neck and her chin. It is the daintiest of all French creations, and she obtained it in Paris from a grandee dame who makes her living making women more bewitching.

"It is a little coffee cap," says she, "and I put it on mornings before I have dressed my coiffure."

The woman who cannot take time to do this can at least have a little silk cap lined with sachet to put on when resting, or when her hair is drying.

Resting the hair is important, and few women understand how to rest the hair. It should be taken about and allowed to hang, the hair should be brushed and then shaken loose. The head should be rested at the same time, and the nerves of the face allowed to relax. Relax your hair, if you want it to grow prettily.

How to Look Neat During Housework

THIS is a problem that every woman tries to solve. The simplest way is to arrange your hair before you get up in the morning, wear a white shirtwaist and a short dark skirt. A gingham apron should be worn while making breakfast and at home when you are alone. The apron should be made like a child's, buttoned up the back, and with full sleeves gathered to a band at the wrist. A large pocket is very handy.

An apron of this sort covers the entire dress, and when same is removed one is neat in appearance for her husband's return from work or for an unexpected visitor.

Expert Nurse Tells How to Keep Baby in Best of Health

By Sarah Behn-Randall

BABY'S DISEASES

IN discussing the principal diseases which commonly attack babies and children, it is well to start off with the admonition that most of these diseases can be prevented by the proper care of the child before it is attacked.

We have already discussed the feeding of the baby, its exercise, fresh air and other vital matters, but have said nothing about clothes.

The most important article of clothing of an infant, and the one which wards off disease, is the flannel bandage, which should be kept wrapped about the baby's abdomen. The region of the stomach, intestines and back is the most sensitive, and if cold is contracted there the consequences are fatal.

Keep on Flannel Bandage

The bandage, made of soft flannel, is from ten to twelve inches wide, and long enough to be wrapped at least twice about the baby's body. This bandage must be kept on all the time except when bathing. Watch out for draughts at that time and have the room toasty warm. If you do not have the bandage, or if you do not manage it properly, any of the diseases mentioned in this article may result.

When any of these diseases develops do not hesitate to call a physician. Here is the way to tell what is the matter with the baby, giving early stages of disease, how long it takes to develop, how long it lasts, and the principal symptoms. Only a doctor can tell you what to do to relieve it.

MEASLES—Incubation (that is, the time it takes for the disease to fully develop) ten to eleven days; date of characteristic symptom, first day; characteristic symptom, fourth day; characteristic symptom, purplish red, slightly elevated spots, scattered and in groupings, cold in head, running eyes, hoarseness, cough; duration of disease from incubation, seven to eight days.

CHICKEN POX—Incubation lasts thirteen to seventeen days. Characteristic symptom on the first day. Characteristic symptom, pea-sized, scattered vesicles, or irruptions on the skin. Slight fever. Duration of disease is a week or less, but the quarantine should be from three to four weeks.

How to Tell Typhoid

TYPHOID FEVER—Incubation lasts seven to ten days. Characteristic symptom on seventh or eighth day. Characteristic symptoms are rose rash, slightly elevated spots, with nose bleed, diarrhoea and headache. Duration of disease, two to four weeks.

SCARLET FEVER—Incubation lasts from one to seven days. Characteristic symptom appears on the first or second day. The characteristic symptom is an intense, bright red (scarlet) blush all over the body, form throat and sometimes vomiting at the first. Disease may continue more than nine days and quarantine is six weeks.

VARIOLOID (modified form of smallpox)—Incubation lasts seven to twelve days. Characteristic symptom develops on third day, usually, but it may be the first or second. Characteristic symptoms are red, elevated papules, then vesicles, and these often become pustules, or irruptions. Headache, backache and vomiting. Lasts about fourteen days. Quarantine must be six weeks.

Indications of Diphtheria

DIPHTHERIA—Incubation, two to twelve days. Characteristic symptom on the first or second day. Characteristic symptom is a white membrane on tonsils and other parts of throat. Weakness, fever. Lasts ten to fourteen days and quarantine should be from four weeks.

WHOOPING COUGH—Incubation lasts from two to seven days. Characteristic symptom not seen to forerun disease. The characteristic symptom is a paroxysm of coughing, followed by a long inspiration, or in-breath, which gives a deep, whooping sound. Vomiting and slight blood. Lasts six to eight weeks and quarantine is while the whoop lasts.

MUMPS—Incubation lasts seven to twenty-one days. Characteristic symptom on the first day. Characteristic symptom is a swelling in front of, below and behind the ear and below the jaw. Pain when chewing. Disease lasts a week or less and quarantine from three to four weeks.

THE GRIPPE—Incubation one to seven days. Characteristic symptom, of fever and prostration, often on the first day. General aching and coughing, sometimes fever and chills, cold in head. Lasts from three days to two weeks or more.

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

NOT GIRL'S PLACE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a young man, who seems to me all the love in the world for me, but he is a little bashful, and has told a friend of mine of a girl that he would propose, but he does not know how to get at it. What I would like to know is the proper way for a young lady to propose, as next year being out of the thought of proposing to him, as I know he is willing to marry me. I have been keeping company with this young man for the past two years.

HEADING.

THERE is no proper way for a girl to propose. If the man really loves you, he will find a way of proposing. He would be both astonished and disgusted if you took it upon yourself to do the proposing. If he had been attentive to you for two years, it is time he knew his own mind. Treat him a little coolly, and perhaps it will spur him on a bit.

A FOLIAGE FANCY

A NOVELTY of the season is foliage and stems matching the color of the hat, while the flowers are in the natural tints.

Malline continues to be the smartest material for veils, and the trimming of it is selected in a shade so as to correspond with the hair.

"THE TURN OF THE BALANCE"

BY Brand Whitlock

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE nearest dwelling was a quarter of a mile away, and the neighbors were still farther removed by prejudices, religious and social. Thus the old women were left to themselves. The report was that they were thieves, and the miserable manner of their lives supported rather than belied this theory; there was a romantic impression in a country-side that knew so little romance that a large amount of money was hidden somewhere about the ugly premises.

On an evening in late October Bridget Finnegan was getting supper. The meal was meagre, and when she had made it ready she placed a lamp on the table and waited for Margaret, who had gone out to fasten the stanzy in which the barnyard animals slept.

Margaret came in presently, locked the door, and the sisters sat down to their supper. They had just crossed themselves and heaped their plates with potatoes when they heard a knock at the door.

Intruders!

Margaret went to the door, shot back the bolt, and pulled on the knob. And then she turned and cast a look of terror at her sister. Some one was holding the door on the other side. The strange resistance of this late and unknown visitor, who but a moment before had wanted to come in, appalled her.

She pressed her knee against the door, and cried to lock it again. But now the door held against her, she strained and pushed, then turned and beckoned her sister with frightened eyes.

Bridget came, and the two women, throwing their weight against the door, tried to close it; but the unknown, silent and determined one was holding it on the other side. This strange conflict continued.

Presently the two old women glanced up; in the crack, between the door and the jamb, they saw a club. Slowly, slowly, it made way against them, wedging, turning, pushing, forcing its way into the room. They looked in awful fascination.

The club grew, presently a foot of it was in the room; then a hand appeared, a man's hand, gripping the club.

They watched; presently a wrist with a leather strap around it then a head, and by degrees a forearm, bare, enormous, hard as the club, corded with veins, hairy, red and covered with a thick fell of black hair, came after it.

Then there was a final push, an oath, the door flew open, and two masked men burst into the room.

Three hours later Perkins, a farmer, who lived a quarter of a mile away, hearing an unusual sound in his front yard, took a lantern and went out. In the grass near his gate he stumbled on a mule, he saw a woman's body, and going to it, raised the rags of his lantern into the face of Bridget Flanagan. Then he, too, trembled and her face was stained with blood; her clothes were torn and covered with the mud through which she had dragged herself along the road from her home.

Perkins called and his wife came to the door, holding a lamp above her head, shading her eyes with her hand, afraid to go out. When he had borne Bridget indoors Perkins took his two sons, his lantern and his shotgun and went across the fields to the Flanagans.

In the kitchen, bound and gagged, Margaret lay quite dead, her face beaten in by a club. The two old women must have fought desperately for their lives.

The robbers, for all their work, as Perkins learned when Bridget almost miraculously recovered, had secured twenty-three silver dollars, which the sisters had kept hidden in a tin can—the fatal fortune which rumor had swelled to such a size.

Perkins roused the neighborhood, and all night long men were riding to and fro between Lain Corners and the city.

A calm Sunday morning followed, and then came the Coroner, the reporters and the crowds. While the bell of the little Methodist church a mile away on the Gilboa Pike was ringing Mark Bentley, the sheriff, dashed up behind a team of lean horses, sweating and splashed with mud from their mad gallop.

Archie Released

Four days before the Sunday of the Flanagan tragedy Archie Koerner finished his year's imprisonment.

Archie began at once to hunt for Curly, and at last found him at Hunt's place in the Tenderloin. The grip in which Curly held his hand while he wrung his greet ing into it made him glad.

They remained at Gray's all that Saturday night and the following day, spending the Sunday in reading such meager accounts of the murder of Lee Flanagan sisters as the morning papers were able to get into extra editions.

CHAPTER II.

SERGEANT CRAGIN had just finished calling the roll of the night detail at the Central Police Station when Superintendent of Police Michael Cleary unexpectedly appeared in the great drill hall.

Cleary stood in the doorway with Inspector McFee; his cap was drawn to his eyebrows, revealing but a patch of his close-cut white hair; his face was clean and freshly shaven, his small chin-whiskers newly trimmed. The velvet collar and cuffs of his blue coat, as usual, were carefully brushed, the diamonds on his big gold badge flashed in the dim, shifting light. The men did not often see their chief, he usually arrived at noon and went down, spending most of his time, presumably, in his office on the first floor.

"Men," he said, "I want a word with you and Inspector John Flanagan job. We're got to get the murderers of Lee Flanagan before I'm town right now. I want you to keep a lookout. Run in every suspicious character you see to-night—no matter who he is—with him in. See that you do that! We're going to have a clean-up. I want you to pull every place that's open after hours. I want you to pinch every crook and gun you know. See what I mean? I won't stand for any nonsense! You fellows have been loafing around now long enough. By God, if something isn't done before morning I'll have some of you'll wish you'd never heard me. You've got your orders; now execute them. See what I mean?"

BOILED SALAD DRESSING

One-half tablespoon salt, one and one-half tablespoons sugar, one teaspoon mustard, one-half tablespoon flour, two eggs (can use one if you wish to), one and one-half tablespoons melted butter, three-quarters cup of milk, one-quarter cup of vinegar. Mix dry ingredients, add beaten egg; add rest of ingredients very slowly. Cook in double boiler until thick like cream.

No. 11 Hendry street, Dorchester.

CAKE WITHOUT EGGS

Now that eggs are so very high, it is desirable to know how to make a good cake without using any. So I am pleased to send you a rule for one which is considered by all who have eaten of it equal to any other cake: Take two and one-half cups of flour, three heaping teaspoons of baking powder, one cup of sugar, one-fourth of a nutmeg (ground), one-half cup of raisins, one-half cup of butter and lard mixed, one and one-fourth cups of milk. Mix dry ingredients well; melt milk on stove to heat; add to it the lard and butter, and when they boil add to the others and stir well. Have one dessertspoonful of soda in the cake will keep indefinitely. Bake in a round tin, preferred one with chimney.

MRS. J. REDDIN,

LEMON PIE

One teacup of sugar, three tablespoons of cornstarch, one tablespoon of butter, two eggs, one lemon (juice and grated rind and rind of lemon). Stir cornstarch into the sugar well; add butter and one cup of water and cook until clear, taking care not to scorch. Remove from the fire, out of stove, add the well beaten yolks of the eggs and the lemon and put in shells of paste already baked. Whip the whites of eggs stiff, adding two tablespoons sugar and few drops lemon juice. Spread over pie and brown in the oven.

MRS. ADDIE DUNBAR,
No. 315 Concord street, South Framingham.

ORANGE JUMBLES

One-third cup butter, one cup sugar, one egg, one-third cup milk, three-quarters cup flour, two level teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon orange extract. Cream the butter, add sugar, milk and orange extract. Sift together thoroughly flour, baking powder and salt and add. Cut with dough-nut cutter, sprinkle with sugar and bake in a moderate oven.

Have Your Clothes Suit Your Position

IF you are employed in a dirty office, for instance, a printing firm, a shop or factory, or a hardware shop, it is advisable to wear skirts three inches from the ground, but if you work in a private office which is well furnished and nicely carpeted, wear longer skirts, just escaping the ground. Your employer will want you to appear neat at all times. Tailored shirt waists and black or tinted wool tailored skirts are most suitable for office wear. If black silk waists are preferred, never fail to soften the effect by wearing white linen turnovers and cuffs. Avoid flashy colors; be dignified in your dress as well as your manner. Frills and ruffles do not belong in an Augustine shirt waist office and are never businesslike.

Do not for one moment consider that money spent on office clothes is wasted. It will be time well spent and better than money spent on chiffons, laces and picture hats for dress wear.

RENOVATING

PASSEMENTERIE trimming, when not entirely worn beyond service, but which looks a trifle shabby, can be freshened by simply sponging on both sides with clear black tea and ammonia.

FAIREST FLOWER IS 'ROSE OF THE RANCHO'

Frances Starr, Belasco's Youngest Star, Returns in Delightful Play.

Dainty, bewitching Frances Starr, seductively Spanish, wraithfully American, ravishing, wilful, again charms a crowded Boston playhouse as "The Rose of the Rancho." Belasco-perfect in its production, this delightful drama of old California, which opened last night at the Majestic Theatre for its second Boston engagement, brought round after round of applause for the company in general and the leading characters in particular.

Miss Starr went straight to the hearts of her audience. The clear tones of the book, which put many a quaint and amusing phrase in her mouth, lost nothing by her delivery. As the daughter of a Spanish mother and an American father she displayed the opposing natures of both races in bewildering conflict.

With inimitable naivette she tells her American lover of her fashion's opening words: "Never to marry a coffee-colored galoot," in which word of anger she literally kicks up before the venerable padre, firing that lovable old gentleman the shock of his pious life. Again, in a tempest of heartfelt fury as her lover, thinking he was betraying her people, she pours out a torrent of words at him, with vixenish vehemence. And, all through, she is sweetly pretty, a veritable "Rose del Rancho."

Charles Richman was consistently manly as Kenyon, the American secret service agent. In the last act he played the tough and really hero admirably, in all he gave excellent support to Miss Starr.

A splendid characteristic part is given by Frank Losee as Padre Antonio, who is such a dear, benignant and wise old soul, utterly unable to be angry with his beloved Rosa. And A. Hamilton Revelle was equally admirable as Don Luis, the Spanish rival of Kenyon, with his grandiose "Caramba, now." John W. Cope as Kinkaid, the land jumper, takes meatless and unsympathetic handled leading roles.

The minor members of the cast display the usual Belasco finish in their acting, and the staging and accessories do credit also to the master hand. Good houses should be the rule for the "Rose of the Rancho," for of the fairest flowers that ever bloomed in the dramatic garden.

THREE STARS WHO SHINE ON LOCAL STAGE

Dainty Boston favorite comes in a Belasco drama; famous tragedian revives classic piece of years gone by and musical comedy idol is in her element in a new vehicle.

FRANCES STARR. JAMES O'NEILL. LULU GLASER.

"DUBLIN DAN" IS BIG SUCCESS

Barney Gilmore, in a new play entitled "Dublin Dan, the Irish Detective," written by himself, scored a personal triumph at the Grand Opera House last night. The story tells of a counterfeiter who, secretly known as Duke McCoy, assumes the name of Richard Forsyth, a wealthy and respected merchant. Dublin Dan, who is given the real Mr. Forsyth, is led to believe that the counterfeiter is her lawful guardian. She becomes infatuated in him, but is betrayed, and left to shift for herself. Dublin Dan, a detective who is working on a counterfeit case for the government, thwarts at once Hillis's plans, and plays him behind bars. A pretty love story is carefully interwoven. The entire company is well deserving of commendation. Melba May made herself a big favorite as Fancy, a flower girl. Miss Marion Shirley played Rosalie Forsyth, the merchant's ward, artistically, the rounds of applause that greeted her efforts being well merited.

THRILLING TALE OF STRUGGLE FOR GOLD

A thrilling story of life in the California goldfields, "A Struggle for Gold," was well produced yesterday by the stock company at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. Dick Aldridge and his father are poor miners unable to develop their property. They borrow money from Bruce Barrington who discovers that the beautiful Margaret McLane is in love with Dick and that all of Barrington's gold will not suffice to have her change her mind and wed him. Failing in his love affair Barrington decides to force payment on the notes. Later the charge of murder is laid at the door of Dick Aldridge by Barrington and his accomplice, Jim Lawton. He is cleared in the end, however. Charlotte Hunt appeared as Margaret, a character well suited for her dramatic resources, and Clayton Legge was admirable in the role of Dick Aldridge. Louis Bresen achieved success as Bruce Barrington while a most entertaining Irishblarney came from the lips of Florence Hale as Bridget O'Hugh.

PLAYS AND OPERA STAY ANOTHER WEEK

Last evening's performance of "The Sunday" at the Boston Theatre was an occasion of unusual interest on account of the presence of a number from the British Army and Navy Veterans' Association which had in its membership many men who took part in the Soudan campaign. Manager Morton extended an invitation to these representatives of the British army and their ladies in order to see how the play appealed to experts in its pictures of military life in the Soudan. The visitors were very enthusiastic. "The Soudan" has proved so popular that its former great run in the old days of the Boston Theatre, when it was played for nearly 200 nights, may be successfully duplicated.

Judging by the size of the audience at the Colonial Theatre last evening it looks as though "The Red Mill" could easily duplicate the tremendous business which this delightfully entertaining piece did over in New York last season. In a musical sense the piece is of exceedingly high merit, and Victor Herbert has satiated the play with vocal numbers which never fail to catch the audience. As a piece of comedy the play has much to commend it and the leading roles which are so admirably played by these famous comedians, Montgomery and Stone, are quite the most humorous creations that one can imagine.

Marie Doro, in "The Morals of Marcus," began the last week of her remarkable engagement at the Park Theatre last evening, before the crowded house which has uniformly greeted this piece ever since it began its Boston engagement. There is a great deal about this piece which makes an instant appeal to intelligent people who are in search of a play of intellectuality. As the days go on over this excellent piece the more does one discover, for it is full of meritorious points which are not always discernible at the first hearing.

The second week of "Lohengrin" began at the Castle Square last evening, and again a large audience did honor to the bestowing its applause upon one of the finest Wagnerian productions ever seen in this city. The cast brought forward Harry Parker as Lohengrin, and never before has that capable singer showed the extent of his skill, either voice or in the expression of stage character. Miss Blanche Edwards filled the role of Elsa equally well.

SOME PLAYS COMING HERE.

Ernest Hogan comes to the Globe next week in all new show, entitled, "The Oyster Man."

There was a lively sale at the box office of the Park Theatre all the morning, and it was very evident that "The Hypocrites," with Jessie Millward, Richard Bennett and a strong cast, will be royally received next Monday evening, when it begins its Boston engagement.

Hattie Williams and "The Little Cherub" will be the next attraction at the Hollis Street Theatre, opening there a week from Monday. The company is promised to be even stronger than the one which was heard here last season.

O'NEILL GIVES LIFE AND POWER TO 'VIRGINIUS'

Great Drama Is Revived at the Globe and Pleases Great Audience.

If more actors would produce classical plays as James O'Neill does, not only would the drama be improved, but the box office receipts also, and no longer would it be true that "Shakespeare spelled ruin" at the Globe last evening Mr. O'Neill played, for the first time here, the title role in Sheridan Knowles's great drama "Virginius," made famous by Macready, Forrest and McCullough. As an example of sincere, forceful, intelligent acting of such a tremendously strong role Mr. O'Neill was superb. Rarely—in fact, hardly once in a decade—does an actor get into the footlights the innermost feelings found in such a tragic character, but Mr. O'Neill made the Virginius live, breathing, soul-stirring father, and was fairly rewarded by an enthusiastic audience to make a brief speech. For the principals in his cast, Mr. O'Neill was unusually good support—Norman Hackett playing Icilius, for role which M. O'Neill used to play with Forrest, and Charles D. Herman the Appius. Both indulged in fine elocutionary effects. Fleming was the Virginia, a lovable, beautiful and entirely natural character. Less said about the other members of the company the better. Scenically the piece was unusually good for a traveling organization, but it might have the stage manager to look at his lighting effects from "out front," especially at the Saturday evening performance. To-night Mr. O'Neill revives his famous play of "Monte Cristo," repeating it Wednesday afternoon and Saturday evening. On Thursday and Friday evening and Saturday matinee he plays "Julius Caesar."

7 OFFICERS OF MILITIA ARE RETIRED

Adjutant-General James P. Parker, acting under the authority of the commander-in-chief, has issued General Order No. 24 the mandates reorganizing the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. The order abolishes several offices in the militia, the present incumbents to receive honorable discharges when it takes effect on November 15. The officers who will retire are as follows:

Squadron of Cavalry—Lieutenant Colonel Frederick Sherburne Hamblen, quartermaster; George S. Figg, commissary.

First Corps of Cadets—Lieutenant Colonel Frederick Sherburne Hamblen, quartermaster; Lieutenant Fred A. Smith, commissary; Arthur W. Monroe, chaplain.

First Corps of Cadets—Lieutenant Forrest G. Barnicoat, commissary.

Second Corps of Cadets—First Lieutenant George C. Partington, commissary.

MEDIUM GIVES UP PROPERTY

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—When the Grand Jury takes up the charge of larceny against Mrs. May Pepper-Vanderbilt, the "Bright Eyes" medium, it will find that the property which she was alleged to have secured in an unlawful manner from Edward Ward Vanderbilt has all been recovered by Mrs. Pepper-Vanderbilt to her husband.

Mr. Vanderbilt's daughter caused Mrs. Pepper-Vanderbilt to be arrested on a larceny charge, alleging that she had induced Mr. Vanderbilt, while he was incompetent, to convey to her a large portion of his property.

"LOLA FROM BERLIN" GIVES LULU GLASER GREAT CHANCE

Is Abundance of Plot, Music and Fun to New McNally Production at the Hollis.

Lulu Glaser and a clever company strike a tuneful note of comedy in John J. McNally's "Lola From Berlin," which opened on a two weeks' run at the Hollis Street Theatre last night. One or two passing choruses and a half dozen brilliant song hits are interpolated in a rippling comedy of the genuine variety, and the flow of mirth is easy and spontaneous, at times riotous, when Miss Glaser is its centre, and well sustained when it emanates from Ralph C. Herz. Indeed, the "writer of the old school" runs the charming star a close second as a funmaker.

There is an abundance of plot to the new McNally production. Once or twice the action approaches the melodramatic, in spite of the all-prevailing mirthful theme. As "Lola," Lulu Glaser is the breezy, fresh German girl, just arrived, and her dialect is winning in spite of an occasional relapse into the lingo of the conventional delicatessen order of the Dutch comedian of the recognized type.

Aside from Mr. Herz's consistently clever bit of character portrayal, but little may be said of Miss Glaser's support. The company is small and cast and chorus are not unfittingly subordinated to the all-pervading charm of Lola's presence. Some of the songs are deliciously new and catchy, notably Miss Glaser's "There's Not Another Girl Quite Like You." It is well-calculated to be whistled and hummed for days.

HOUSE ROBBED AS FAMILY IS AT CHURCH

Ernst F. Johnson of No. 58 Lancaster terrace, Brookline, reported to the police to-day that his home was entered by burglars some time Sunday, and considerable jewelry and silverware stolen. Mr. Johnson and his wife went one pew Sunday, leaving the servant girl in charge. While the girl was at church the house was broken into. Mrs. Johnson discovered that twelve silver spoons, four sorghins, six pearl-handled knives and a case containing old heirlooms, Grandma Cowell's, was effected through a small window in the pantry.

WHAT THE VARIETY HOUSES HAVE TO OFFER

Keith's Theatre

Zelle de Lussan, who enjoyed great popularity when she was a star with The Bostonians," and who also sang with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, is the headliner at Keith's this week. Last night the audience could see and hear her, and she made her sing three encores. A distinct musical novelty is an aggregation of nine called "The Pianophends," who do stunts with five pianos, all nine taking part by playing the instruments in ensemble. Ed. Thompson, the well-known character actor, who has delighted thousands in comedy, appears with Thomas J. Dice and Company in a delightful playlet by Junie M. Greene, entitled "For Love's Sweet Sake," which affords him an admirable vehicle. Mark Sullivan, a Boston boy, in monologue, song and dance, received considerable praise for his ambitious efforts; Wesson, Walters and Wesson appeared in a jolly farce, "Hotel Repose," and Lillian Shaw, "The Ghetto Girl," is a clever singer of English and Dowery songs. Leo St. Elmo is a versatile instrumentalist and Carroll and Baker appear in some good Jewish character comedy. James and Jennie Lee, the Nerdlin, in a miniature circus, and the Worpert Trio have some good specialties. Professor Ancilotti's "mind-reading" dog Pluto closes a fine bill. The farce here described as "sprightly soubrettes," and the Alpha Trio, "delightfully comedy," a highly attractive bill that is bound to draw big houses.

Columbia Theatre

A goodly number of Boston women, all young and fashionably dressed, attended the opening "ladies' matinee" at the Columbia yesterday and thoroughly enjoyed the lively bill presented by the Reilly and Woods burlesquers. The show is one of extraordinarily good entertainment this season. The play is an old one, but pretty a crowd as one could meet in a month of Sundays, while the comedians ably seconded the efforts of the jovial Pat. "Reilly in Egypt" is the name of the piece, and the umph of the specific artist's art, which "Reilly in Politics" out-burlesqued anything in the burlesque line seen in this city in years. The olio was in keeping with the pace set by the burlesque, and consisted of five lively vaudeville acts. The Van Cooks had an oddity styled "Harmony in a Chinese Laundry," which pleased immensely. Miss Ruth Wright and the Electric Clark Sisters were the other big favorites. The wrestlers will be seen in action this evening, the principals being Samson and Yankee Rogers. The matinee will be more numerous than ever Friday night.

Palace Theatre

Harry Bryant's Extravaganzas Company presents one of the best entertainments of the season. His "Fortieth Wife" and "On the Board Walk" are two of the brightest units ever given at the Palace in many seasons. The company is headed by Harry Bryant, whose tramp character has no superiors. He is helped out in the fun by Charlie Harris, Billy K. Wells, John J. Black, Jack Elliott, Willie Edith Bryant, Lillian Singer, Marcia Halvorsen, Florence Hughs, Elizabeth Mayne, Laura Anderson and Pearl Black lead the chorus. The company's bill includes Darmody, Jugerer; the eight English Rinkler girls; Lilian Singer, cornetist; Jack and Bill Elliott and Walter Belisle, comedy acrobats, and Billy K. Wells, comedian. The Palace bill presents Heaster and Seeley, masters of the Holbrooks, musical artists; Arthur Codey, vocalist; Nash and Thorn, comedy team, and Harry Jordan, trapeze artist.

Lyceum Theatre

In two burlesques and an olio of exemplary quality, Fred Irwin's big show proved one of the brightest, cleverest and most up-to-date of the season's attractions yesterday. The burlesque is called "The Great White Way." Many features are introduced, and the characters of Murray and Livingston as an Italian is one of its strong parts. The comedians are Larry Campbell and Joseph Brady. In the olio the principal number is that given by Welch, Lynch and Miss Frances Hooper, entitled "Victim Hunt." It is a clever written piece, combining fun with a touch of pathos, and with a finale that ends happily. Another novel bit is called "The Reverse Fireman and the Engineer," in which Brady and Mahoney take the parts.

Austin & Stone's Museum

Real bear and Teddy bear enthusiasts alike enjoyed the wrestling matches of Peter Catz and his mammoth four-cornered partner in the curio hall at Austin & Stone's Museum yesterday. Features also were the Apricot family of Neapolitan equilibrists and instrumentalists; Nora De Marr, who climbed a ladder of swords, barefooted; Flo Austin, rifle shot; Yeal Johnson, bag puncher; Harry De Marr, man with the iron jaw; Megrelli, in anatomical demonstrations; De Debonnaire, English Punch and Judy, the big snake, and Pirkis, in the theatre, resplendent in new decorations, were "The Court Around the Corner," introducing Tom Meadows as the district attorney, and Mickey Finn as the judge. Incidentally, it brought out some clever dancing by Vera Belasco

Orpheum Theatre

The Orpheum Theatre management this week has a bill that it may be well proud of. It is made up of stars that know how to entertain. Irene Franklin, in her musical novelty, is a top-liner, with Edwin Keough and his company on a par. This company is eighty styled "A Bit of Pathos." For a vaudeville sketch it is a winner. It takes the audience into a scene from Shakespeare and has well sung Irish songs. Its scenic effects are stunning. The Mescott troupe of gymnasts are equal to the distinction, "World's Greatest," and in Ollie Mescott the troupe have a fearless, dashing and daring performer. She turns three somersaults in the air and lands on her brother's shoulders. Frank Byron and Louise Langdon are exceedingly amusing in their sketch, "The Dude Detective." Miss Norton and Paul Nicholas, who are in a third sketch, have one that keeps the house in continual good humor. It shouldn't be missed. Ryan & White, boys who can sing and dance, make a hit. Patsy Doyle is a real good comedian, who knows how to amuse his hearers with decidedly up-to-date jokes, music and dry manner. Bobby Van, the literary comedian, is a Boston favorite and retains his popularity. Karcinti has good sounds on the wire. Irene Franklin, Keough and his company and Byron and Langdon were called before the house until they were too tired to respond further.

Howard Athenaeum

Many feature acts have come to the Old Howard, but none have ever proved more popular than Troja, that able singer of saucy songs. In the burlesque, too, the beautiful Olga Orloff and it was one hurricane of delight. The thirty young women of the Toreadors are well chosen as to looks and pretty a group as one could meet in a month of Sundays, while the comedians ably seconded the efforts of the jovial Pat. "Reilly in Egypt" is the name of the piece, and the umph of the specific artist's art, which "Reilly in Politics" out-burlesqued anything in the burlesque line seen in this city in years. The olio was in keeping with the pace set by the burlesque, and consisted of five lively vaudeville acts. The Van Cooks had an oddity styled "Harmony in a Chinese Laundry," which pleased immensely. Miss Ruth Wright and the Electric Clark Sisters were the other big favorites. The wrestlers will be seen in action this evening, the principals being Samson and Yankee Rogers. The matinee will be more numerous than ever Friday night.

Tremont Theatre

If there hadn't been other numbers on the bill to follow her, Vesta Victoria might have been singing her songs until midnight at the Tremont, and, as it was, the audience forced her to continue until her act had been lengthened far beyond its schedule and she was completely tired out. Miss Victoria has a lot of new songs, even better than "Poor John," and her novelty hit as the Queen of the Jolly Isles, in her parts of leaves, is the best she has ever given. Wilfred Clarke and company in a comedy sketch develop unusually hearty laughs, and W. H. Harvey, the juggler of many articles, has a girl comedienne with him who is a wonder. She ought to be mentioned in the program. James F. MacDonald, a Boston boy, does excellent work in his humorous monologue, and Baptiste and Franconi, equilibrists, have a good number. Maud Lambert makes a pretty picture whenever the spotlight man condescends to illumine her. Mosher, Hough and Mosher have some unusual stunts on a bicycle, and the Howard Brothers, in a difficult, pleasing and unusually artistic number with a hoop pole, feather and Keenan, in "Kidding the Kid," and the Dockstader Keating trio, cyclists, closed on the bill were Washington A. Coles, the jolly humorist, who was a big favorite during the recent campaign, and "made good" with the boys yesterday; the Musical singers and dancers, and Jesse R. Burden, Irish comedian and dancer.

PICTURES AT THE HUB.

Somehow they always hit the bull's eye at the Hub Theatre, and this week's programme is no exception to the rule. The programme of illustrated songs contains four up-to-date ballads, together with a march ballad which yesterday made a big hit. William H. Gierse and the Misses Marie Cumella and Rae White gave every evidence of being strong favorites. The program of incidental and instrumental numbers by the ladies' orchestra completes the bill, changed on Thursday.

"We will go after a lap to-day," was the declaration of the Root-Bargetto pair in the six-day race at the Park Square Rink, and the other ten teams accepted the dash, and riotous riding is scheduled in the ten hours' speedfest program which begins at 1 o'clock.

The eleven teams are bunched with the same score, with the exception of the Italian pair, which is a lap in the rear and are still in the count.

Judging by the range of accidents on the opening day of the race there is more trouble in store for the daring riders to-day, and with the field on speed-crazy some serious developments are likely to come at any period in the mad dashes to secure a coveted lap, which would mean a substantial seat on the result of the race.

Hopper of the Western team, who had such a narrow escape from being hurled to death in the final minutes of riding last night, will be on deck to join his partner, Hardy Downing, when the gun sends them away to-day, unless the doctors finally forbid his further participation, but old-timers like Hopper are not easily discouraged and will take all kinds of chances.

Such a whirlwind of excitement that marked the closing hour of the race last night was never witnessed in the Hub.

Excitement at Finish.

The crowd which packed the track was thrilled by the final sprint, and the riders, aroused to a maddening desire to gain a circuit on the field in the last burst of speed, let themselves go.

The gun had sounded for the last mile when the riders tore around the track at breakneck speed. With but a couple of turns to go to end the day's grind, a pair of eleven riders were closely knitted together, when a couple of riders crashed and went down, pulling half the bunch. Hopper, in order to avoid the mixup of riders, rode wide up the bank, going straight for a post at the top, when his wheel was smashed to splinters and Hopper struck the obstacle head on and came down the steep bank unconscious with an ugly cut in his head. The crowd was under a frenzy, believing for the instant that he had been killed, but he recovered in his training quarters.

The riders who remained in the saddle made the finish, Root coming away in the lead, with Sherwood, Moran and Tribler close up. None of the fallen riders was denied any loss of laps on account of the accident.

There was only one change in the teams. The Italian pair had all kinds of trouble early in the race, Fallini getting a dislocated elbow and Bizzari nearly getting his head broken running into the rail. The latter persisted in getting back, and with Mahan, a Lowell boy, will continue.

The two Italians were given something to eat on the track, as they had not tasted food for twenty-four hours since their arrival from abroad. The team lost a lap and also another for changing their make up of their combination, but Bizzari succeeded in getting one back in the evening's ride.

Riders Battered Up.

It was a battered and bruised lot of riders who got ready for to-day's fray, and their bodies will pick up a few more splinters, if nothing worse, before the final signal at the rate the men are travelling on the steep track.

Going at the pace of twenty miles and over for the hour, with a steady succession of sprints, there is bound to be all kinds of mix-ups, and the riders are determined to win at all costs, and their desperate action is considered.

All the veterans are riding strong, but have hopes that there is some strength in every team which will bear watching. The killing off process by the past six-day winners doesn't seem to take effect, and it's a big fight for favorites here on their hands to lose any team on the list.

HARVARD TEAM OFF FOR YALE

The Harvard cross-country team left Cambridge this morning for New Haven, where it will compete against Yale in the first dual meet with this university. This afternoon the squad will walk and ride over Yale course.

The team will be made up as follows: F. W. Carter, '09; J. H. Coolidge, '10; M. S. Crosby, '08; R. E. Dole, '10; R. F. Hoyt, '10; C. Lang, '10; R. B. Smith, '08; E. L. Souder, '10; M. H. Whitney, '08; F. Woodman, '08.

YANK ROGERS' DEBUT.

Yankee Rogers, one of the wrestlers in the three-night division, will make his initial bow to Bostonians on the night of the 20th inst. This evening when he faces the mighty Samson, who put up such a fine battle against Steers last season on the same stage. The bout promises to be by far the most exciting that Manager Farren has yet arranged.

TERRIBLE TURK LOST.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 12.—Before a crowd of 2,000 spectators at Mechanics' Hall, John Perolli of New York defeated Nurulla the "Terrible Turk," in catch as catch can style, taking two consecutive falls. Frank West of New York was thrown by Young Drakes in twenty-one minutes in an impromptu match.

TOMMY QUILL IN MAIN BOUT WITH NELSON

Tommy Quill of Brockton will make his initial appearance in this section as a main bout performer to-night at the Winnisimmet Club. Although he never boxed here before he is winding up his local career by good judges as the dark horse among the lightweights of the East.

It was only a few weeks ago that the Brockton boy hopped over to Philadelphia and handed it out to Young Erne of that town in an up-to-date manner.

Any boy who can do that in a six-round bout must certainly have some class to his makeup.

If he gets away with Dick Nelson to-night the Brockton boy need not fear any of them in the lightweight division.

On the other hand, if the fighting lad from New York proves himself to be the best boy his stock will take a big jump in these parts.

CLOSE FINISH IN SPEEDWAY MATINEES

There is a very close finish in the Fall series of matinees at Charles River speedway, held under the auspices of the Metropolitan Driving Club, which on Wednesday, as no less than three trotters are tied in points for the first and second prizes, as in the pacing division Silverwood, Belle Gold and Ashland Bert each have a fighting chance for the second trophy.

Following are the leaders in the matinees held to date:

MAIN BOUT CALLED OFF

GLOUCESTER, Nov. 12.—There was too small a house for Billy Kirkland of the Athletic Club bouts and he refused to go on with his bout with Willie Cornell.

The principal bout was between Young Keating of this city and Kid O'Brien of Lawrence, a 10-round go, Keating being given the decision.

The preliminary was to have been a six-round go between Bert McCue of Ipswich and Eddie Ashes of Beverly. The bell saved McCue from a knockout in the first round. He went down for the count in the first minute of the second round and the fight went to Jones.

Kid Silva and Sammy Dexter, two local bantams, went six rounds, Dexter getting the decision.

BAKER LOSES TO HAYES

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—Grover Hayes of Chicago gave Harry Baker of Fresno a big surprise in their bout at the Spring Garden A. C.

Hayes had all the better of the first five rounds, for one of the few times under this three of his opponent. In the last round Baker got the fighting almost continually at long range, and gently administered matters. Twice during this round he staggered Hayes with right hand swings and uppercuts to the jaw.

PAPKE TO FIGHT HERE.

Billy Papke, the western cyclone, will appear in two bouts in Greater Boston next week. Monday night he meets Walter Stanton of California at the Cooper A. C. in a twelve-round bout and later in the week will take on Harvey Conneally at the Winnisimmet A. C., Chelsea.

32,000 TICKETS SOLD.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 12.—The Yale football ticket management announces that all of the 32,000 seats in the big gridiron enclosure for the Princeton game have been applied for. Every precaution is being taken to keep the field dry by covering it with straw, and guards are on duty night and day to prevent a possible fire under the enormous stand.

GOODMAN SHOWS UP WELL IN OLD-TIME SLUGGING BATTLE

"Cyclone" Johnny Thompson, the fighting ringster from the West, is apt named. He is a whole bunch of tornadoes wrapped into one and he is easily classed with the toughest members of the fraternity. He made his first appearance in the Hub at the Cooper A. C., against Kid Goodman, the Hebrew champ, and after twelve rounds in a rip-roaring slugging match a draw was the verdict by the arbitrator.

The occasion also heralded Goodman's return to the local ring, and it was a safe bet that all who saw the terrific encounter with the Western whirlwind were willing to stake their word that the Kid never fought a better fight in his life. The Hebrew was right there with all of his winning stuff and showed that he could handle the hardest kind of game which is generally the luck to run up against.

He gained a big advantage in the third round by opening up Thompson's left eye, and the optic was of little use to the visitor for the remainder of the distance, as the blood was constantly trickling down over his face, obscuring his sight. But it never had any effect on his aggressiveness. He was boiling and tearing in without waiting for Goodman to lead, and nothing short of a pile driver could have put him down.

His only drawback was foul tactics, in using his head a la Battling Nelson style, butting continually as he bored in with lowered headpiece and trying to run it against Goodman's cupola.

Cyclone Always Rushing.

From first to last it was Thompson wading in, taking Goodman's delivery, in his endeavor to get close enough to administer by did put over some heavy body welts which caused Goodman to do more than his share of clinching in the latter part of the bout. Goodman tried to pick off some shots for the jaw when the cyclone first rushed and succeeded well in handing the Cyclone some jolts and uppercuts in the early rounds, which caused him to cover up. Goodman's left had him baffled at first, but he fathomed it by using his superior strength and letting drive with crushing rights of the wearing down variety.

Thompson bled like a stuck pig from his cut eye, and Goodman was crimson with the fluid. The Hub boy kept peppering the cut whenever he saw his opportunity and never gave it a chance to heal up any.

The Westerner presented a sorry sight with his features obscured with gore, but it had no effect on his ferocious style of milling.

No matter how often Goodman pushed over rights to the head or chopped with the same hand or hooked solid lefts to the body Thompson kept coming, his marvelous strength seeming to be uncollapsible under any kind of an onslaught. Nor he had never been knocked out was not surprising, considering how easily he took everything Goodman could slip him.

At nearing it the Kid met his match, as that was Thompson's favorite method of weakening his adversary, and in the clinches there was some gruelling work done, in which Thompson seemed to revel. He did his best to hold his head on Goodman's chest and hammer away, but the Kid was not so agreeable to that kind of warfare and tried to cop a smack in the clinches, and worked some snappy jolts and short punches while they were fastened together.

First Blood for Kid.

Thompson started off like a stoner, jabbing and sending a hard right to the body before Abe got wound up. Then the Kid got busy and did some of his best infighting and let go an uppercut which just missed. The Kid labbed while Thompson was waiting for an opening for his right. He flashed it over and rather surprised the Kid.

The Kid smashed his right to the damaged eye in the fifth round which spread the gore around and practically closed half of Thompson's vision. Thompson was no less game as a result but was off his range in his attack.

The Kid came out of his corner like a shot in the sixth, trying to get to Thompson before he had his hand up, but failed. They locked to each other in the clinches with Thompson doing the heavy mussing. As soon as they were broken by the referee Thompson sloughed in with his right with a cut giving heed to his defence and had Goodman weakening when the bell came.

In the eighth and ninth rounds Thompson's greatest strength was in front. Goodman came out in the tenth and walloped twice with rights and lefts on the head and early evened the scales. The Kid put home the best clouts in the eleventh and Thompson only landed in the clinches.

The windup was full of fireworks with both trying for a finishing punch but unable to reach one over.

In the semi-final Jackie Williams of Cambridge and Young Chisholm of Chelsea went eight fast rounds with honors even. Young Sullivan of Roxbury stopped Young Sullivan of the South End in four rounds.

LANGFORD AND YOUNG PETER MEET ON COAST

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 12.—Sam Langford of Boston and Young Peter Jackson are in fine fettle for their bout here to-night.

Langford has created a good impression by his cleverness displayed while sparring with his numerous helpers. Manager Woodman says his man is prepared to meet Jackson in any style of fighting that the latter sees fit to start.

Langford will continue training right up to the time he goes into the ring. He claims to be in perfect condition, but has a hobby of working all the time.

Betting on the fight is even money and take your pick.

MANY COACHES WATCH YALE ELEVEN WORK

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 12.—The regulars will get a driving drill to-day and Wednesday, a slight let-down Thursday, and no work whatever on Friday. The undergraduates are planning to make the practice Thursday an occasion for a big demonstration. They will march to the field, 1,500 strong, and cheer the eleven to the echo.

The return of Paige and his ability to stand the practice makes it certain that Yale will put upon the gridiron Saturday every varsity player of prominence, although Wheaton will not be at his best and will not start the game.

Howard Jones, who was knocked senseless in the Brown game Saturday, will be able to report to-morrow.

New coaches swarmed upon the field, a total of fifteen being present. The newcomers included ex-Captain Tom Shevlin, Jim Hogan, Frank Hinkey, Foster Rockwell, Olcott and Roraback.

"IT IS AN ILL WIND," ETC.

One of the peculiar results of the present financial scare is the increase in the number of doctors, lawyers and business men who have lately included themselves among my customers. Men who heretofore never paid less than $25, $38 and $50 for suitings, feeling the need of economy, have flocked to me for clothing. That these men are now lost to the high priced tailor for all time is a certainty. I have pleased them and surprised them, just as I will please and surprise you.

If I could make you understand that I am giving good clothing—if I could only write an advertisement that did justice to the clothing that I am making, I would get the order of every fair minded man in Boston.

HARVARD WILL WORK IN SECRET

It will be behind closed gates that the Harvard kickers will work this afternoon between 2:30 and 4:15. Five coaches have some new plays to work out and they don't want outsiders to see them.

Wendell's case will likely be decided by the faculty to-day.

With Dave Campbell coaching the ends the work to-day will be the most strenuous of the season. It's evident that the Harvard coaches are desperate and will make all kinds of efforts to get the eleven into shape by Saturday.

The regulars did not take part in any scrimmage yesterday, but were given light work, which, by the way, was not the most encouraging.

The Harvard undergraduates will hold another mass meeting this evening in the Union to try out football songs for the Yale game. The first song did not meet with the entire approval of the undergraduate body and new ones will be tried this evening. Some of the coaches are expected to explain the football situation to the undergrads this evening.

The officials who have been selected for the Dartmouth game will be Joe Pendleton of Bowdoin, referee; Whiting of Cornell, umpire; Morice of Pennsylvania, field judge, and Burleigh of Exeter, head linesman.

SHERWIN WILL BE BIG AID TO DARTMOUTH

DARTMOUTH, Nov. 12.—If Ingersoll gets back in the game to-day Dartmouth's eleven will be complete for Saturday's battle with Harvard. All the other players are in shape.

Sherwin has joined the squad, after being away a week with a sprained ankle, and is his old self in the backfield. He will be a valuable addition to the team.

There were plenty of coaches on the field. Captain Ford looked after the backfield, Donnelly the ends, Dr. O'Connor the tackles, Biff Hall handled the guards and Joe Gilman took the second team in charge.

GAME AT BROOKLINE.

On next Saturday afternoon at the Brookline playgrounds the strong Carlisle football team from Merrimac, Mass., will line-up against the fast St. Alphonsis A. A. of Roxbury. The St. Alphonsus boys, it is said, have a strong team and will give excellent record so far this season having won every game.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

85 AND 87 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, NOVEMBER 12, 1907

Begin Your Christmas Shopping Now

It Will Save You Time, Worry and Money

We urge our readers, especially our women readers, to begin their Christmas shopping NOW.

Complete it, if possible, within a week, but be sure that it is BEGUN at once—to-day, if convenient; not later than Thursday in any event.

The recent financial excitement will make little difference in the amount of money spent on Christmas presents.

It is not like the American people to economize at the expense of others. Perhaps the Christmas money will not be spent as foolishly as it is sometimes. Fathers will not be presented with openwork stockings, or daughters with quilted covered books which they never read. More taste and judgment will be used in selecting presents. The givers, having no money to waste, will try to make their gifts USEFUL AND VALUABLE.

BUT A GREAT DEAL OF MONEY WILL BE SPENT, and it can be spent more wisely, as well as with more comfort and convenience, if shopping is begun before the stores are crowded.

If you have read the advertising columns of this newspaper for the past few weeks you know that the merchants are preparing for a big Christmas business.

The wonderful advance in the science of advertising within the last few years makes your choice easy.

It is for your benefit that Christmas advertisements are printed early in the season.

By profiting by them you do away with all the annoyance of crowds, of desired articles "just out" when you ask for them, of dreary jams on the subway and elevated on your way home, and of the necessarily late deliveries that sometimes cause bitter disappointment on Christmas morning.

Women, naturally, are fond of shopping, and EVERY WOMAN KNOWS HOW TO SHOP.

A man, boastful of his business sense, prompt judgment and knowledge of values, goes into a store and buys the first thing he sees, if it happens to answer the general requirements of what he wants.

His wife or daughter, who has the instinct of her sex for scientific buying, carefully goes from counter to counter or from store to store, seeking EXACTLY WHAT SHE WANTS.

When she finds it, she buys; not before.

She enjoys this work, of course. She enjoys looking at things for their own sake, even if she cannot afford to buy them. She delights in a bargain as a hunter delights in a bear-killing. But the hunter, while willing to climb up and down mountains, through thickets and over rivers, IF IT IS NECESSARY TO GET THE BEAR THAT WAY, prefers to shoot his bear from his tent if he can.

And the woman shopper, although she will go through crowds and bargain-counter rushes undaunted, IF SHE HAS TO, prefers to shop quietly and comfortably, and to come home fresh and triumphant rather than exhausted and empty-handed.

This editorial is intended to persuade the women, who do all the really important buying, that the best bargain hunting is now.

The salespeople have more time, and their tempers have not yet been frayed by weeks of contact with impatient, irritable shoppers.

Everybody employed in the great stores, from the suave floorwalker to the brisk, businesslike elevator boy, who carries the whole stock in his head and recites it at the various floors, is eager and enthusiastic.

The excitement of the coming rush has lain hold of the whole force, but the dreary strain of it all has not begun to tell.

Also there is more cheerfulness and courtesy to be met with from other customers.

Frantic women, panic-stricken lest the last few days prove too short for the making of their purchases, are not fighting for space at the counters.

Foolish, blundering men, sent by their wives on half understood errands, are not scolding the clerks and insisting that their purchases be attended to ahead of those of everybody else.

It is good hunting now in the stores. You can buy easily, wisely and cheaply if you buy NOW.

Incidentally, you are far more likely to make presents that will please those for whom they are intended, and that is the really fine thing about the beautiful custom of Christmas giving.

As Seen from a Distance

(FROM THE TAUNTON GAZETTE.)

ONE of the little humors of the present political situation is the suggestion of Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston that the Independence League candidate, Mr. Coulhurst, withdraw in his favor. Mr. Coulhurst very properly and promptly replies that he believes, in view of the recent emphatic opinion expressed by the people, that if anyone withdraws it should be Mayor Fitzgerald, and that he is quite willing to accept the Democratic indorsement in addition to the Independence League nomination. With the Independence League ranking as the second political party in the State at the present time, Mr. Coulhurst is fully justified in his stand. It is hinted that the latter may also receive the indorsement of the Good Government Association in Boston, and if this is so it looks as if he might be Boston's next Mayor, whether the Democrats indorse him or not.

Leads Them All in Influence

(FROM THE SOUTH BOSTON NEWS.)

THE BOSTON AMERICAN not only leads all the other papers in circulation, but what is still better, it leads them all in influence. It is the greatest factor in Boston to-day in the moulding of public opinion.

"Sounds His Death-Knell"

(FROM THE CONCORD PATRIOT.)

THE election of John B. Moran by such an overwhelming majority, coupled with the strenuous opposition of Mayor Fitzgerald to that election, in all probability sounds the political death-knell of the acting Mayor.

And it is just as well if such be the result. Fitzgerald is not a big man, has not been, and never would be, if he were continued in office for the next twenty years, unless he grew like a cedar of Lebanon.

The general estimate outside of Massachusetts is that he is small physically, small mentally, small morally, and if the public be right in this estimate, the scorn Fitzgerald is reired to the oblivion which he has earned the better it will be for the Democracy of Boston, Massachusetts and New England.

There is much speculation as to why Fitzgerald opposed Moran and by his opposition also converted Boston from a Democratic to a Republican city. But those who are familiar with conditions in the Hub say that Moran was opposed by Fitzgerald because Moran was straight, because he was not usable by the little cliques that wanted to do so.

Little Editorials from the People

MORE PAY FOR ARMY MEN

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I would like to call your attention to the question of increased pay for the enlisted men of the United States army. Their pay has not been increased in the last forty years. In the period of prosperity, pretty nearly all workingmen's pay has been increased. Since the Spanish-American war our army has been increased to 65,000, but the War Department in all its wits and to find out how to keep it filled up with the kind of men most desirable for the army, and finds it impossible to do so. Men of intelligence will not enlist at the present wage. This country, with a population of 84,000,000, should have the small army it possesses the best and most effective in the World, but if the present state of the army continues, we will have the least effective army in the world.

PATRIOTIC.

ON RESTAURANT TIPS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—With reference to an editorial on "Tipping Waiter," the public is fully to blame for the small wage scale existing among restaurants. It is my opinion that the tipping problem is well considered by the management while arranging their wage scale. Should not this prejudice be forthcoming from the majority of a restaurant's patrons, the management, who is the direct beneficiary, would be compelled to increase the salary of his waiters in order to hold them. I deem it that every perquisite bestowed upon the waiter is the equivalent to net gain/loss for the management.

The Highest Compliment Ever Paid to Moran

From Mayor Fitzgerald's Paper, BEFORE Election

Mr. Moran is using the office of District Attorney as if it were his private property, degrading it to a degree that has never occurred in the history of this country.

Men with criminal records of years' standing have their cases nol prossed; crimes of an atrocious character are not being punished.

The laws of the Commonwealth are being set aside with a degree of abandon that ought not to be heard of in a civilized community.

Mr. Moran, with the boldness, not to say the effrontery, which has characterized him ever since he came into office, appeals to the people to re-elect him because of his self-proclaimed honesty, public virtue and freedom from the corrupt taint of political associations.

Yet the record which he is making at Pemberton square every day reveals a closer intimacy with corrupt politicians than has characterized the administration of any office within this part of the country within our recollection.

We think that this bluff which he is making, with its pretence of virtue before the public, will be called on Tuesday next, and that six months after Mr. Dennison is introduced into office the people will wonder how they stood for Moran for two years.

42 Men Out of Job

(FROM THE PITTSFIELD EAGLE.)

CHAIRMAN RYAN will be spared the task of selecting forty-two Democratic election officers next year. Will that duty fall upon Jeremiah M. Linnehan, Mr. Hisgen's local representative?

Optimism

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

I'm no reformer; for I see more light
Than darkness in the world; mine eyes are quick
To catch the first dim radiance of the dawn,
And slow to note the cloud that threatens storm.
The fragrance and the beauty of the rose
Delight me so, slight thought I give its thorn;
And the sweet music of the lark's clear song
Stays longer with me than the nighthawk's cry.
And in this great throe of pain called Life
I find a rapture linked with each despair
Well worth the price of Anguish. I detect
More good than evil in humanity.
Love lights more fires than hate extinguishes,
And men grow better as the world grows old.

Bobbie's Essays

By William F. Kirk

TWO (2) NEW SONGS

GOOD MORNING, Bobbie, sed my teecher. What do you know this morning to rite about, she sed.

Nothing, teecher, I todd her, except new songs. I herd two (2) new songs at a matinee yesterday.

That is a pritty subjeck, sed my teecher, the songs of a nashun is what we know the nashun by, my teecher sed. As a grate man once wrote, my teecher sed, it doesn't matik much differns who makes the nashuns laws, it is who makes the nashuns songs, my teecher sed.

Songs is of many kinds, such as old songs, new songs, funny songs & sad songs etc.

The songs I herd at the matinee yesterday was both of them new & sad. One of them was Bye Bye, Deery, Yure Place Maiks me Weepy, or sumthing like that. The other was still sadder & it was called The Janitor's Child. It tonid about a Janitor which had a child with lay dying or anyhow awful sick with the Mumps.

The child was saying sum last words to its father which went like this, with vary sad musik:

Farewell, Paw.
Yure work is awful raw.
Not a sip has passed pure lip
& not a tip has reached yure grip.
Farewell, Paw, Farewell.

When the man sang this song everybody cried, brekaus I guess thay all wished that janitor was working in thare fac.

I doant see why peepul feel so sad about songs, thay are only words & musik anyway, & after the song is done nobody is ded on the bloody field of battel, it is only what the song says, you cant believe everything you heer in songs.

My Pa rote a song once, he only rote the words & when he caim hoam he sed to Ma I know I am late tonite, deerest, but I have been riteing the words of a littel ballad, you can rite the musik & we will clean up sum coin, my Pa sed.

This is the song, sed Pa.

A gurl was standing on the street
Without good shoes upon un her feet.
Her eyes was full of betsy teers,
She had worn old shoes for years & years.
& as she stood thare in the snow
These words she sed in deepest woe:

CHORUS—

I shud have beat it when I could.
But now, Alas, my shoes ain't good.
So here I am, to tell the truth,
How bad it feels
Without rubber heels
Wich gives a elastic step of youth!

How do you like it, sed Pa.

Vary bad, sed Ma. What do you know about a elastic step of youth Ma sed, if you had a elastic step you would be hoam eriler nites, Ma sed.

Vary well, sed Pa. I will take this poem, he sed, & never agenn will I burst into song, sed Pa, for the spring of Geenius within me is frose, Pa sed.

That's all I can rite about songs, I aint much.
